

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Cl. No. 0:1J64:9 F5

Date of release for loan

Ac. No. 14555

This book should be returned on or before the date last stamped below. An overdue charge of one anna will be charged for each day the book is kept overtime.

THE ORIGINAL ORDER OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS

BY

SIR DENYS BRAY

METHUEN & CO. LTD.
36 ESSEX STREET W.C.
LONDON

First Published in 1925

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

CONTENTS

PREFACE	PAGES xiii
INTRODUCTION	I
T.T.'s DEDICATION	45

THE SONNETS

(The starred sonnets belong apparently to a second edition, Introduction pp. 34-41: the Roman numerals give the Quarto order.)

ADORATION

1. A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted (XX)	47
2. Some glory in their birth, some in their skill (XCI)	48
3. Let those who are in favour with their stars (XXV)	48
4. Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts (XXXI)	49
*5. What is your substance, whereof are you made (LIII)	49
6. Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye (LXII)	50
7. My glass shall not persuade me I am old (XXII)	50
8. Shall I compare thee to a summer's day (XVIII)	51

INVITATION TO MARRIAGE AND ESCAPE FROM MORTALITY IN FATHERHOOD

9. O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power (CXXVI)	51
*10. Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor bound- less sea (LXV)	52
*11. When I consider every thing that grows (XV)	52
*12. But wherefore do not you a mightier way (XVI)	53

	PAGES
*13. O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are (XIII)	53
14. As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st (XI)	54
15. From fairest creatures we desire increase (I)	54
16. When forty winters shall besiege thy brow (II)	55
17. Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend (IV)	55
18. Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye (IX) .	56
19. For shame deny that thou bear'st love to any (X)	56
20. Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck (XIV)	57
*21. Those hours that with gentle work did frame (V)	57
22. Then let not winter's ragged hand deface (VI)	58
23. Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly (VIII)	58
24. Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest (III)	59
*25. Who will believe my verse in time to come (XVII)	59
26. When I do count the clock that tells the time (XII)	60
27. Lo, in the orient when the gracious light (VII)	60

THOUGHTS IN ABSENCE, LONGINGS AND BROODINGS

28. Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd (XXIV)	61
29. Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war (XLVI)	61
30. Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took (XLVII)	62
*31. So are you to my thoughts as food to life (LXXV)	62
*32. So am I as the rich, whose blessed key (LII)	63
33. How careful was I, when I took my way (LXVIII)	63
34. How heavy do I journey on the way (L) .	64

OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS vii

	PAGES
35. Thus can my love excuse the slow offence (LI)	64
36. If the dull substance of my flesh were thought (XLIV)	65
37. The other two, slight air and purging fire (XLV)	65
38. Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed (XXVII)	66
39. When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see (XLIII)	66
40. Is it thy will thy image should keep open (LXI)	67
41. How can I then return in happy plight (XXVIII)	67
FOREBODINGS OF DEATH, SELF-DEPRECIATION, JEALOUSY OF THE RIVAL POET
42. That time of year thou mayst in me behold (LXXIII)	68
43. But be contented: when that fell arrest (LXXIV)	68
*44. Or I shall live your epitaph to make (LXXXI)	69
*45. Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry (LXVI)	69
46. No longer mourn for me when I am dead (LXXI)	70
47. If thou survive my well-contented day (XXXII)	70
*48. O, lest the world should task you to recite (LXXII)	71
*49. Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth (CIII)	71
*50. Who is it that says most? which can say more (LXXXIV)	72
*51. My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still (LXXXV)	72
*52. Was it the proud full sail of his great verse (LXXXVI)	73
*53. O, how I faint when I of you do write (LXXX)	73
54. Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid (LXXIX)	74

	PAGES
*55. O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends (CI)	74
*56. I never saw that you did painting need (LXXXIII)	75
*57. Let not my love be call'd idolatry (CV)	75
58. How can my Muse want subject to invent (XXXVIII)	76
59. So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse (LXXVIII)	76
60. I grant thou wert not married to my Muse (LXXXII)	77
61. So is it not with me as with that Muse (XXI)	77

WARNINGS AGAINST THE SLANDERS AND CONTAMINATION OF THE WORLD

62. That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect (LXX)	78
63. Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view (LXIX)	78
64. Ah, wherefore with infection should he live (LXVII)	79
*65. O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem (LIV)	79

REPROACHES FOR THE BREAKING OF A TWOFOLD TRUTH, HERS AND HIS; FORE-BODINGS OF DESERTION; FORGIVENESS

*66. Full many a glorious morning have I seen (XXXIII)	80
67. Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day (XXXIV)	80
68. That thou hast her, it is not all my grief (XLII)	81
69. Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all (XL)	81
70. How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame (XCV)	82
71. Some say, thy fault is youth, some wanton- ness (XCVI)	82
72. But do thy worst to steal thyself away (XCII)	83

OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS ix

	PAGES
*73. Being your slave, what should I do but tend (LVII)	83
74. So shall I live, supposing thou art true (XCIII)	84
*75. That god forbid that made me first your slave (LVIII)	84
76. When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light (LXXXV[[I])	85
77. Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault (LXXXIX).	85
78. No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done (XXXV)	86
79. Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits (XLI)	86

TRIUMPH OF LOVE OVER SILENCE AND SEPARATION, OVER THE PASSAGE OF TIME, THE POMPS AND VICISSITUDES OF THE WORLD

80. How like a winter hath my absence been (XCVII)	87
*81. Sweet Love, renew thy force! Be it not said (LVI)	87
*82. From you have I been absent in the spring (XCVIII)	88
*83. My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming (CII)	88
84. Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long (C)	89
*85. Against my love shall be, as I am now (LXIII)	89
*86. Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws (XIX)	90
*87. Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn (LXVIII)	90
*88. To me, fair friend, you never can be old (CIV)	91
89. The forward violet thus did I chide (XCIX)	91
90. Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear (LXXVII)	92
91. Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain (CXXII)	92

	PAGES
92. Were't aught to me I bore the canopy (CXV)	93
*93. Why is my verse so barren of new pride (LXXVI)	93
*94. No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change (CXXIII)	94
*95. Those lines that I before have writ do lie (CXV)	94
*96. If my dear love were but the child of state (CXXIV)	95
97. Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul (CVII)	95
*98. Not marble, nor the gilded monuments (LV)	96
*99. When in the chronicle of wasted time (CVI)	96
*100. If there be nothing new, but that which is (LIX)	97

REMORSE, CONFESSION, DESPONDENCY AND FAREWELL

101. What's in the brain, that ink may character (CVIII)	97
102. Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage (XXVI)	98
*103. As an unperfect actor on the stage (XXIII)	98
104. Against that time, if ever that time come (XLIX)	99
*105. Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind (CXIII)	99
*106. Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you (CXIV)	100
*107. 'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd (CXXI)	100
108. O, never say that I was false of heart (CIX)	101
*109. Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all (CXVII)	101
*110. Let me not to the marriage of true minds (CXVI)	102
*111. That you were once unkind befriends me now (CXX)	102
*112. Your love and pity doth the impression fill (CXII)	103

OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS xi

	PAGES
113. O, how thy worth with manners may I sing (XXXIX)	103
114. Let me confess that we two must be twain (XXXVI)	104
115. Then hate me when thou wilt ; if ever, now (XC)	104
116. When to the sessions of sweet silent thought (XXX)	105
*117. They that have power to hurt and will do none (XCIV)	105
*118. O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide (CXI)	106
119. Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore (LX)	106
*120. When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd (LXIV)	107
121. As a decrepit father takes delight (XXXVII)	107
122. Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there (CX)	108
*123. What potions have I drunk of Siren tears (CXIX)	108
*124. Like as, to make our appetites more keen (CXVIII)	109
125. When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes (XXIX)	109
126. Farewell ! thou art too dear for my possess- ing (LXXXVII)	110

THE DARK LADY

*127. Those lips that Love's own hand did make (CXLV)	110
128. How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st (CXXVIII)	111
*129. The little Love-god lying once asleep (CLIV)	111
130. Love is too young to know what conscience is (CLI)	112
131. If thy soul check thee that I come so near (CXXXVI)	112
132. Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy 'Will' (CXXXV)	113
133. Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch (CXLIII)	113

	PAGES
134. So, now I have confess'd that he is thine (CXXXIV)	114
135. Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan (CXXXIII)	114
136. In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn (CLII)	115
137. Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate (CXLII)	115
138. Be wise as thou art cruel ; do not press (CXL)	116
139. Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me (CXXXII)	116
*140. In the old age black was not counted fair (CXXVII)	117
141. Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art (CXXXI)	117
142. In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes (CXLI)	118
*143. Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes (CXXXVII)	118
*144. When my love swears that she is made of truth (CXXXVIII)	119
145. O call not me to justify the wrong (CXXXIX)	119
146. Canst thou, O cruel ! say I love thee not (CXLIX)	120
*147. Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep (CLIII)	120
*148. My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun (CXXX)	121
149. O me ! what eyes hath Love put in my head (CXLVIII)	121
150. My love is as a fever, longing still (CXLVII)	122
151. O, from what power hast thou this powerful might (CL)	122
152. The expense of spirit in a waste of shame (CXXIX)	123
*153. Two loves I have of comfort and despair (CXLIV)	123
*154. Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth (CXLVI)	124
TEXTUAL NOTES	125
INDEX OF FIRST LINES	127

PREFACE

FIRST a word to explain the system I have adopted in the text. Where the rhyme-link, the meaning and function of which are discussed at length in the Introduction, consists in an identical word-link, the word itself is given at the bottom of each of the linked sonnets; and if there are two or more such words (other than me and thee, which are not treated as self-sufficient rhyme-links), they are set forth in full. Otherwise the rhyming word or words are enclosed in brackets to emphasize the absence of the normal word-link. For the sake of brevity only one of the two rhymes within the sonnet is given—the rhyme closest to the corresponding rhyme in the linked sonnet. The italicized words represent the links between the sonnets (to which the italicized numerals act as pointers) that join up on the omission of the starred sonnets, which, as explained in the Introduction, are apparently later additions.

I have included T.T.'s Dedication. Properly speaking it has, perhaps, no place outside those editions which follow the order of the Quarto. But whether Mr. W. H. was in fact the Onlie Begetter of the Sonnets in the sense that he was their sole inspiration, or whether, as I fear is more likely, he was the sole filcher of them, it is to Mr. W. H. (for who believes Benson now?) that we ourselves owe them. To Mr. W. H., therefore, be all Happinesse and that Eternitie promised by our ever-living Poet.

Textual notes have been kept as few as possible. Two of them are unavoidable, for the emendations in sonnets 96 and 104 flow directly from the rhyme-linked sonnet sequence; slight in themselves—the substitution of the plural for the singular, the singular for the plural—they are backed by precedents in the Quarto. To the emendations in sonnets 63, 94 and 105, none of which are original, the linked sequence lends strong support. In sonnet 35 I have sought to give new life to an old emendation which has fallen into unmerited neglect. In sonnet 51 I have merely added one more to unnumbered attempts at enlightening a passage almost certainly corrupt.

I am deeply indebted to Phyllis Gosset for much fruitful criticism and for godmothering the book through the press in my absence from England.

D.B.

DELHI,

Oct. 28, 1924.

INTRODUCTION

TO most lovers of Shakespeare's Sonnets the traditional opening has become so familiar as to render the traditional order of the 1609 Quarto almost sacrosanct. Yet even in the second edition of 1640 irreverent hands were laid on both.

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,

yielded pride of place to

Ah, wherefore with infection should he live ;
And with his presence grace impiety ?

and difference is hardly less marked than likeness in the rest of the order. Nor did the Quarto order reassert itself readily. True, it was reproduced in the third edition, which appeared in 1710, just a century after the Quarto itself. But it was the 1640 order that was reproduced in the fourth edition, which appeared almost simultaneously ; and until nearly the close of the eighteenth century it was the 1640 order that on the whole held sway. From then onwards the Quarto became gradually established as the standard text.

Nevertheless with a quickening of interest in the Sonnets there came a growing dissatisfaction with the traditional order ; a growing disbelief, that is, that it represented either the chronological order in which Shakespeare wrote them, or the artistic order in which he finally arranged them ; a growing conviction that he had no hand in their publication and that Thorpe, the printer of the 1609 Quarto, had come by them unlawfully and printed them without any sort of authority.

Of the many attempts to reconstruct the true order the first was apparently made by Knight in 1843 ; rearrangements by Victor Hugo, Cartwright, Bodenstedt, Delius, Massey, Burgersdijk and Stengel followed in rapid succession. Then Dowden's championing of the traditional order stemmed the tide for a while. But only for a while. For the failure of his gallant defence of the continuity of the Sonnets in the Quarto edition will in the end be found to mark a hardening of opinion against the traditional order ; the failure of a champion so scholarly, so sane, and so thorough is significant indeed. The tide soon set in again. Few editors, however great their reverence for the Quarto, could refrain from pointing longingly to the apparent linking of this sonnet to that for all their separation in the Quarto ; and Copin, von Mauntz, Samuel Butler, Godwin, Stopes and Walsh, came forward one after the other with definite rearrangements of their own. Forrest, who must be almost the latest editor of all, is not content with rearrangement ; he allots to the Five Authors of 'Shakes-peare's Sonnets' each his own contribution. Now all these arrangements have a subjective basis. They are based partly on what each editor, often under the stimulus of some splendid or provocative theory, holds to be identity of subject ; partly on æsthetics and the like. They are consequently often enough triumphs of literary mosaic. I can lay claim to no such triumph of ingenuity. My own claim is at once greater and more humble. It is no new theory that I have to set forth. Only one hard fact:—the mechanical coupling of sonnet to sonnet by rhyme-link. Nor any brilliant arrangement of my own. Simply Shakespeare's.

Now amidst multitudinous variations, all editors who have attempted to rearrange the Quarto order are agreed on the inseparability of some thirty to forty sonnets found coupled in the Quarto. Nobody, for instance, has ever separated the sonnets which appear as XLIV and XLV in the Quarto, and 36 and 37 in the Text:—

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But ah, thought kills me, that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone;
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd.
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me.
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

They are linked together inextricably by meaning. Indeed were it not for the first sonnet the second would be unintelligible: only thus can we learn that 'the other two' make up with 'earth and water' the four elements which constitute 'life's composition'. So wedded are the two that no one, not even the editor of the 1640 edition, has had the hardihood to put them asunder. But now mark—at first sight it will seem a trivial coincidence, possibly even a technical blemish—how common rhymes (gone-moan: gone-alone, to say nothing for the moment of thee-be: thee-me) link them mechanically together. Hardly less inseparable is the pair formed by L and LI in the Quarto, 34 and 35 in the text:—

How heavy do I journey on the way,
 When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
 Doth teach that ease and that repose to say:
 'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend!'
 The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
 Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
 As if by some instinct the wretch did know
 His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee.
 The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide;
 Which heavily he answers with a groan,
 More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
 For that same groan doth put this in my mind:
 My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
 Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed:
 From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
 Till I return, of posting is no need.
 O, what excuse will my poor beast then find,
 When swift extremity can seem but slow?
 Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
 In winged speed no motion shall I know!

Then can no horse with my desire keep pace ;
 Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
 Shall weigh no dull flesh in his fiery race ;
 But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade :
 Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
 Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go.

More than a third of the rhymes in these two sonnets are taken up with mechanical links (woe-know, mind-behind in 34 and slow-know, slow-go, find-wind in 35) that bind them together. Take other pairs of sonnets, coupled in the Quarto, coupled in the second edition, coupled in subsequent rearrangements, coupled by meaning, and coupled mechanically by common rhyme. Take, for instance, 29 and 30 which correspond to XLVI and XLVII in the Quarto:—

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
 How to divide the conquest of thy sight ;
 Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
 My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
 My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
 A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes ;
 But the defendant doth that plea deny,
 And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
 To 'cide this title is impanneled
 A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart ;
 And by their verdict is determined
 The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part.
 As thus : mine eye's due is thine outward part,
 And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
 And each doth good turns now unto the other,
 When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
 Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother.
 With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
 And to the painted banquet bids my heart ;
 Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
 And in his thoughts of love doth share a part.

So, either by thy picture or my love,
 Thyself away art present still with me;
 For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
 And I am still with them and they with thee;
 Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
 Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

The close connection between the two is unmistakable. The mechanical link is as aggressive as the verbal parallelism. It is a double, almost a treble link: sight-right, heart-part, part-heart in 29, answering to sight-delight, heart-part in 30. But the examples I have taken may seem too much alike, conventional and full of conceits at that, lending themselves to idle repetitions and plays on words. So let us turn to couples of a very different character. And again I shall relentlessly quote them in full, for from the presence of this trivial mechanical link in the Sonnets flow momentous consequences. Nobody has ever thought of separating XXXIII and XXXIV, 66 and 67 in the text:—

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
 Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
 Kissing with golden face the meadows green;
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
 Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
 With ugly rack on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
 Even so my sun one early morn did shine
 With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
 But, out, alack! he was but one hour mine,
 The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now,
 Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
 Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?

'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face ;
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace.
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief ;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss ;
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
Ah, but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

Unless the rhyme repetition face-disgrace : face-disgrace is a purposeful link, it is surely a blemish. Nor has anybody, I think, separated XV and XVI (11 and 12 in the text), linked up by stay-Decay : way-decay :—

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment ;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory ;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night ;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time ?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme ?
Now stand you on ~~the~~ top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit.

So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this time's pencil or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.

To give away yourself keeps yourself still ;
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

Or take I and II (15 and 16), linked up by eyes-lies:
lies-eyes :—

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory.
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.

Pity the world ! or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held ;
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer ' This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine !

This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st cold.

Or IX and X (18 and 19), linked up by behind-mind:
mind-kind :—

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife.
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind,
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

For shame deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art lov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

Or V and VI (21 and 22), linked up by on-gone, there-where: loan-one, fair-heir:—

Those hours that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel.
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where.

Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was!

But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show: their substance still lives sweet.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd.
Make sweet some vial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee;
Then what could death do, if thou should'st depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?

Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

Or LXXIII and LXXIV (42 and 43), linked up by day-away, west-rest: away-stay, arrest-interest:—

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west;
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.

This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.

When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee :
 The earth can have but earth, which is his due ;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me.
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead ;
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered.

The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

Or LXXXIV, LXXXV and LXXXVI (50, 51 and 52), linked up by you-grew : true-you : you-grew, with an additional link more-store : more-before between the first two :—

Who is it that says most? which can say more
 Than this rich praise, that you alone are you ?
 In whose confine immured is the store
 Which should example where your equal grew.
 Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
 That to his subject lends not some small glory ;
 But he that writes of you, if he can tell
 That you are you, so dignifies his story.
 Let him but copy what in you is writ,
 Not making worse what nature made so clear,
 And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
 Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
 Being fond on praise which makes your praises worse.

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
 While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,
 Rehearsers character with golden quill,
 And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd.
 I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
 And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry ' Amen '
 To every hymn that able spirit affords,
 In polish'd form of well refined pen.
 Hearing you prais'd, I say ' 'Tis so, 'tis true,'
 And to the most of praise add something more ;

But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
 Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.
 Then others for the breath of words respect,
 Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
 Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
 That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,
 Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
 Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
 Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
 No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
 Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
 He, nor that affable familiar ghost
 Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
 As victors of my silence cannot boast;
 I was not sick of any fear from thence.
 But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
 Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

Or LXXX and LXXIX (53 and 54), linked up by away-decay: say-pay:—

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
 To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
 But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
 The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
 Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
 Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
 Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
 He of tall building and of goodly pride.
 Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
 The worst was this: my love was my decay,

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
 But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
 And my sick Muse doth give another place.

I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen ;
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.

Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

Or LXX and LXIX (62 and '63), linked up by show-owe : show-grow :—

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair ;
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve
 Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time ;
 For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd ;
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To tie up envy, evermore enlarg'd :

If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
 Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend ;
 All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
 Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
 Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd ;
 But those same tongues, that give thee so thine own,
 In other accents do this praise confound
 By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
 They look into the beauty of thy mind,
 And that, in guess, they measure by their deeds ;
 Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
 To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds.

But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
 The soil is this, that thou dost common grow.

Or XCV and XCVI (70 and 71), linked up by sport-report: sport-resort, sort-report:—

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins inclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill us'd doth lose his edge.

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say, thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less:
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

Or XCII and XCIII (72 and 74¹), linked up by lie-die: eye-history:—

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.

¹ The order in the text, 72 and 74, makes it look as if the two sonnets were separated after all. It will be seen in the sequel that this is not quite the case.

Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end.
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend.
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
 O, what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die !
 But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband ; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new :
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place.
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
 In many's looks the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange ;
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell ;
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show.

Or LXXXVIII and LXXXIX (76 and 77), linked up by belong-wrong : tongue-wrong :—

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
 And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
 Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
 And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.
 With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
 Upon thy part I can set down a story
 Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted ;
 That thou in losing me shalt win much glory,
 And I by this will be a gainer too :
 For, bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
 The injuries that to myself I do,
 Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.
 Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
 That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
 And I will comment upon that offence,
 Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
 Against thy reasons making no defence
 Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
 To set a form upon desired change,
 As I'll myself disgrace Knowing thy will,
 I will acquaintance strangle and look strange,
 Be absent from thy walks, and in my tongue
 Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
 Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
 And haply of our old acquaintance tell
 For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
 For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate

Or CXIII and CXIV (105 and 106), linked up by you-untrue : you-true :—

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind,
 And that which governs me to go about
 Doth part his function and is partly blind,
 Seems seeing, but effectually is out
 For it no form delivers to the heart
 Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch
 Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
 Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch,
 For if it see the rudest or gentlest sight,
 The most sweet favour or deformed creature,
 The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
 The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature
 Incapable of more, replete with you,
 My most true mind thus makes mine eye untrue

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,
 Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
 Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
 And that your love taught it this alchemy
 To make of monsters and things indigest
 Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
 Creating every bad a perfect best,
 As fast as objects to his beams assemble?

O, 'tis the first ! 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up !
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup.
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

Or CXIX and CXVIII (123 and 124), linked up by true-anew : true-you :—

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win !
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never !
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever !
O benefit of ill ! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better ;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ills thrice more than I have spent,

Like as, to make our appetites more keen
With eager compounds we our palate urge ;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge ;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding ;
And sick of welfare found a kind of meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd.
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

And, lest it be still thought that it is only in one class of sonnets or in one block of sonnets that

Shakespeare employs such mechanical links, let us break new ground and turn to the Dark Lady. Here at last I can safely forbear to quote. The very title sets up echoes of Will-still: still-Will through sonnet after sonnet.

Is it mere coincidence that there is this rhyme-link in all these sonnet pairs in the Quarto which have ordinarily been kept linked, however much the Quarto order has been otherwise disturbed? The link is so marked and so insistent that one is tempted to place the burden of proof forthwith on those who refuse to recognize in it any significance at all. But let us put the matter rapidly to the proof ourselves. If the Quarto order is not inviolable and if the rhyme-link is not arbitrary or fortuitous but something deliberate and significant, then it ought to be found in pairs separated by chance or design in the Quarto, but reunited by the common critical consent of those who have endeavoured to reduce the contents of the Quarto to a more orderly sequence. And here the Arden edition will serve our purpose as well as any. For one thing, it is among the most recent of editions; for another, Knox Pooler, cautious editor though he is, is at pains to suggest a rearrangement where the Quarto order seems to him hopelessly at fault. I open the book almost at random. 'XXIV. Perhaps this Sonnet . . . should be followed by XLVI.' Place them so, and they correspond to 28 and 29 in the text, linked together by the rhyme-links heart-art, art-heart, lies-eyes in 28, and heart-part, part-heart, eyes-lies in 29:—

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art;

For through the painter must you see his skill,
 To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
 Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
 That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
 Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done :
 Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
 Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
 Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee.

Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art :
 They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war.
 How to divide the conquest of thy sight ;
 Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
 My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
 My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
 A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,
 But the defendant doth that plea deny,
 And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
 To 'cide this title is impanneled
 A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart ;
 And by their verdict is determined
 The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part.
 As thus mine eye's due is thine outward part,
 And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

The next two entries that catch my eye I will place together. 'XXVII . . . Perhaps continued in XLIII.' 'LXI. Perhaps continuation of XLIII.' So rearranged, they stand as 38, 39 and 40 in the text. Henceforth I will refrain from citing the rhyme-links and let the italics speak for themselves :—

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd ;
 But then begins a journey in my head,
 To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd.
 For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see ;

Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Which like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.

Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
 For thee and for myself no quiet find.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
 For all the day they view things unrespected;
 But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
 And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.
 Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
 How would thy shadow's form form happy show
 To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
 When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
 How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
 By looking on thee in the living day,
 When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
 Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay!
 All days are nights to see till I see thee,
 And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
 My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
 Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
 While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?
 Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
 So far from home into my deeds to pry,
 To find out shames and idle hours in me,
 The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
 O no! thy love, though much, is not so great;
 It is my love that keeps mine eye awake,
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake.
 For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
 From me far off, with others all too near.

To proceed with Knox Pooler: 'LII. Perhaps a continuation of XLVIII.' The rhyme-links are there; but in actual fact the order in the text (32 and 33) is the other way round:—

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
 Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
 The which he will not every hour survey,
 For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
 Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
 Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
 Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
 Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
 So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
 Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
 To make some special instant special blest,
 By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
 Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
 Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
 Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
 That to my use it might unused stay
 From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust
 But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
 Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
 Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
 Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
 Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
 Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
 Within the gentle closure of my breast,
 From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
 And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
 For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

Again: 'CVI cf. LIX.'—They stand 99 and 100
 in the text:—

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights;
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.

So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring,
 And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
 They had not skill enough your worth to sing,
 For we, which now behold these present days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise

If there be nothing new, but that which is
 Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
 Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
 The second burthen of a former child !
 O, that record could with a backward look,
 Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
 Show me your image in some antique book,
 Since mund at first in character was done !
 That I might see what the old world could say
 To this composed wonder of your frame,
 Whether we are mended, or whether better they,
 Or whether revolution be the same
 O, sure I am, the wits of former days
 To subjects worse have given admiring praise

Again : 'CIX cf. CXVII.' They stand 108 and 109 in the text —

O never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify
 As easy might I from myself depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie
 That is my home of love if I have rang'd,
 Like him that travels, I return again,
 Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
 So that myself bring water for my stain.
 Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
 That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good ;
 For nothing this wide universe I call,
 Save thou, my rose, in it thou art my all.

Accuse me thus . that I have scant'd all
 Wherein I should your great deserts repay ;
 Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
 Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day

That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchas'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
 Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
 The constancy and virtue of your love.

Even in the Dark Lady series, which most editors seem to regard with Mackail as 'a miscellaneous and disordered appendix,' Knox Pooler recognizes the essential cohesion of several sonnets. Thus: 'CLII cf. CXLII.' They are 136 and 137 in the text:—

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most:
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
 For I have sworn thee fair; more perjured, I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, ground on sinful loving.
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments
And seal'd false bonds of love, as oft as mine
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.

Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those
Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee ;
Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pity be.

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied !

And again : 'CXLI cf. CXXXVII.' They are 142 and 143 in the text :—

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note ;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted ;
Nor tender feeling to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone ;
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be.
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see ?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied ?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place ?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face ?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

These examples—six pairs and a group of three—will perhaps suffice. Their number could easily be doubled, to say nothing of examples where Knox Pooler, without assigning to a misplaced sonnet a definite place, consigns it to a group which contains the missing link for it. Here and there, to be sure, Knox Pooler (like others before him) is wholly wide of the mark. But his skill in hitting the mark so often with no mechanical aid to guide him, stirs in me the tribute of envy.

But if there is a rhyme-link in sonnet pairs inextricably coupled in the Quarto, and again in pairs and trios separated in the Quarto but coupled by common critical consent, can the rhyme-link stop at that? If it is really purposeful—and the sonnets in which we have already traced it are a third of the total—it must serve, one would imagine, a larger purpose than the mere linking of individual sonnets into pairs or trios. If it links individuals together, why not a whole chain of them? This is quickly put to the test. We have only to turn to a fairly well-defined subject like Thoughts in Absence. Nearly all rearrangements include such a group; indeed there is rather more agreement over its contents than over most. It consists of fourteen sonnets, 28–41. Of the fourteen, I have already cited no less than twelve as coupled in the Quarto or coupled by later editors, all of course coupled mechanically by common rhyme. As for the other two, 31 and 41, nobody is likely to quarrel over their union with the sonnets next to them; for the links in meaning are almost as solid as the mechanical links themselves. But the mere linking of sonnet to sonnet is no longer enough. The question is whether all the sonnets in the group so link up as to form one continuous chain. The proof stands clear in the text: it is indeed a strong well-matched chain that this sonnet group presents. There is a striking flow and unity of meaning ; the mechanical links that bind sonnet to sonnet are flawless from end to end.

Let us repeat the test in another group, one even more clearly differentiated—the group of sonnets that deal with what the 1640 editor calls An Invitation to Marriage. No selection on our part is needed : they stand massed together, seventeen in all, at the beginning of the Quarto itself. Quotation of so large a group is of course out of the question. For demonstration we must turn again to the best of all proof—the text itself. Rhyme by rhyme, link by link, the seventeen sonnets 11-27 fall into one continuous chain, in which uniformity of theme, wearisome enough in the disjointed repetitions of the Quarto, is transmuted into unity. Take any theme, any episode—Adoration, Jealousy, Reproaches, Remorse, or what you will—and you will find the same. And as sonnet links by rhyme on to sonnet, so theme links on to theme, until in the end Shakespeare's Sonnets fall into two cycles, the one addressed to the Man right fair, the other to the Woman colour'd ill. So they do, of course, in the Quarto. But with what a difference ! In the Quarto one is striving all the time to preserve (or should I say to create ?) a sense of continuous unity. In the text there is in both cycles an easy flow from sonnet to sonnet, from idea to idea, from subject to subject, each cycle forming a chain by itself, well-knit, compact ; a continuous whole ; a unity both in matter and form. Between the two there is a pause that seems too marked to be other than deliberate. For the last sonnet of the Man cycle is written in feminine rhymes, which the first sonnet alone can parallel ; and the opening sonnet to the Woman is written in eight-syllabled verse, to which there is no parallel at all.¹ Yet, pause notwithstanding, the two cycles are firmly interlinked. The chain is unbroken from end to end. The Sonnets form one continuous whole, of which the last sonnet but one states the theme and furnishes the climax :—

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still :
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.

It is my misfortune that I am obliged in the text to hold up the rhyme-links to scrutiny, link by link. For one thing, they are unattractive in their nakedness. Worse still, their prominence prompts a host of false impressions. It suggests that Shakespeare must have meant something cryptic or mystic by them : that he designed them, for instance, to serve the initiated as a clue to the order of 154 sonnets scattered broadcast before the vulgar ; and so on, and so on. Such speculations are idle. They spring from two fallacies : the one, that Shakespeare had made up his mind from the very outset to conceal the true order of the Sonnets ; the other, that the rhyme-link was his own invention. But even though it were granted for the sake of argument that it was Shakespeare himself who broke the chain and substituted the Quarto order, it is a very different assumption that before he sat down to fashion even the second and third links of the chain he had resolved not to let it go forth unbroken. For this there is no warrant whatsoever. It runs counter to all probability. There is nothing in the first fifty or sixty sonnets too intimate for others to read in their proper order.

¹ In the final text the pause is more marked than the link. In Shakespeare's first edition (see below), where sonnet 128 followed immediately on 126, the link was obtrusive ; state-gate 125, estimate-determinate 126, state-gait 128. Neither gate nor gait occurs elsewhere among the rhymes ; and in the Quarto both are spelt gate.

And mark this. So far from the rhyme-link being the child of Shakespeare's invention, it was a workaday convention of the Elizabethan sonnet sequence, a device commonly employed to heighten the sense of connection or continuity. To attempt to justify this statement in full would carry me into a field of research which is yet unploughed. I must content myself with two illustrations only. In Sidney's Astrophel and Stella, first published in 1591, the link is never long absent from the 110 sonnets, though effectively obscured when used, as it often is, to bind alternate and not successive sonnets together. Take, for instance, the opening and the close of the sequence. Sonnets 1 to 7 are linked alternately; sonnets 96 to 107 are linked successively. An even better illustration is afforded by Daniel's Delia, which also appeared first in 1591, printed in the same book as Astrophel and Stella. A rhyme-link is found in 45 of the 58 sonnets which make up the final edition, linking them together into five groups of 2, one of 3, four of 4, two of 5, and one of 6. Thirteen sonnets only are left unlinked, and of these some at any rate were linked in one or other of the many editions that appeared within the first ten years.

The rhyme-link is in fact so commonplace a convention in the Elizabethan sonnet sequence that it would have been strange if Shakespeare had gone out of his way to avoid it altogether. Not that he followed others blindly in its use. In his search after unity he put it to a use which, so far as I know, has no parallel. Whereas others were content to employ it fitfully to mark and at the same time to enhance the connection between the sonnets of a group within the sequence, Shakespeare employed it universally from one end of the chain to the other, thereby giving the Sonnets a continuity, a unity, a oneness, which other sonnet sequences lack.

For those who have already read unity and continuity into the Quarto, there are no great surprises in the development of the theme. Subjects glide insensibly into one another so often that a clear-cut analysis is no easy matter. But the cycle dedicated to the Youth flows something like this:—Adoration (1-8); Invitation to marriage and escape from mortality in fatherhood (9-27); Thoughts in absence, longings and broodings (28-41); Forebodings of death, self-depreciation, jealousy of the rival poet and others (42-61); Warnings against the slanders and contamination of the world (62-65); Reproaches for the breaking of a twofold truth, hers and his; forebodings of desertion; forgiveness (66-79); Triumph of love over silence and separation, over the passage of time, and the pomps and vicissitudes of the world (80-101); Remorse, confession, despondency and farewell (102-126). The 28 sonnets that make up the Dark Lady cycle fall into three movements 127-138, 139-146, 147-151, each beginning but not ending in a calm, with 152-154 as the finale to the Sonnets as a whole, and hardly need further grouping. Here the interest and pleasure of analysis lie rather in the felicitous linking of individual sonnets and in the escape from the jarring discords in the Quarto, from which the only escape hitherto has been a cowardly repudiation of the Shakespearian authorship of some pleasant trifle, hopelessly misplaced in the Quarto between mighty opposites.

And now reflect how the amazing sonnet-chain has come to be reconstructed. Others who have endeavoured to rearrange the 154 links that have lain for three centuries scattered in the Quarto, have been free to choose here or choose there as their fancy took them. How handicapped in comparison the man who can only choose a sonnet if it is linked by rhyme to the sonnet already in his hand! He is surely like one who tries to grope his way out of a labyrinth blindfolded and with feet shackled. The simile is the very negation of the truth in actual fact. But would it not be truth itself, if the rhyme-link, instead of being universal, designed, and purposeful, were casual, fortuitous, purposeless? Were it simply that, what but a miracle could have transformed this fortuitous and purposeless thing into a guide that should lead us back after three hundred years to the original order of Shakespeare's Sonnets?

Left entirely to itself the rhyme-link would, of course, be a sorry guide. For the rhymes are mostly commonplace, and several combinations are mechanically possible in the case of nearly every sonnet. Few sonnets unfortunately are at all comparable with the opening and the close of the cycle addressed to the Youth, sonnets 1 and 126, which possess no more than three linkable rhymes between them. But aids and checks to the rhyme-link are numerous, and their cumulative influence so effective that the actual margin of error is small. First and perhaps best of all checks is the subject-matter. Congruity of theme or mood is a great sifter-out of mechanically possible but inherently impossible links. And even when the group has been cleared of all extraneous matter, the check is still operative within the group itself. For unless the group is so small that the sonnets fall into their proper place in the chain almost of their own accord (as for instance in the opening group of Adoration), this check is constantly at work, safeguarding the association or flow or development of ideas. Sonnet must link naturally to sonnet. The whole chain of rhyme-linked sonnets must be well-matched and well-knit.

Yet another check lies in the very nature of the rhyme-link. Nearly six times out of seven it consists not merely in a common rhyme but in the repetition of the same rhyming word. Turn back to the many sonnets quoted earlier: they include five pairs only in which the link does not contain the repetition of the same word. Or turn to the opening sonnets in the text: in the first twenty the word-link gives place to a mere rhyme-link thrice only. So normal indeed is the identical word-link that throughout the text I have displayed it at the foot of each sonnet, emphasizing its exceptional absence by placing in brackets the rhyming words which have occasionally to supply its place.

Nor is the word-link Shakespeare's invention. It is another commonplace of the Elizabethan sonnet sequence: Of the 16 links in the 19 sonnets cited from the opening and close of Astrophel and Stella, all but three are word-links. There are 28 word-links among the 33 links in Daniel's Delia. In no less than ten sonnets is the link not merely a rhyme-link, not merely a word-link, but a line-link—the last line of a sonnet (in one instance the last line but one) being repeated as the first line of the sonnet that follows. And from this line-link, too rigid to be bearable for long, though much affected by minor Elizabethans, word- and rhyme-links were presumably evolved.

In the word Shakespeare chooses for the link there seems seldom any particular significance. Yet the word has to be substantial: the slight rhyme me-thee so frequent inside the sonnet itself, is never employed by itself to bind sonnet and sonnet together, a fact which has led me throughout the text to ignore me, thee, in the analysis of both word and rhyme-link. And the rhyme-link must be a sound, straightforward rhyme: there are no parallels to such false rhymings within the sonnet as open-broken in 40, remember'd-tender'd in 111, or assure ye-cure me in 118.

But word or rhyme repetitions do not exhaust Shakespeare's devices for linking the sonnets together. Here and there the links are more of the nature of an elaborate texture than of a chain. Perhaps the best illustration of what I mean is furnished again by Thoughts in Absence, 28-41. Except for one single lapse into a simple rhyme-link at 39-40, the word-link persists from the beginning of the group to the end. But over and above this word-link, we find rhyme after rhyme rising in succession like wave after wave and spreading over three or four sonnets before its force is spent. A rhyme wave is started in 28, another in 29, and others in 30, 31, 32, 34 and so on. Heart-art, art-heart in 28 is followed by heart-part, part-heart in 29, heart-part in 30, art-part in 33. Sight-right in 29 sets up sight-delight in 30, sight-delight in 31, then disappears only to return towards the close with sight-night in 38, bright-light in 39, night-sight in 40, and plight-night, bright-night in 41. In 30 the new theme is feasi-guest, which sets up chest-blest in 32, chest- breast in 33. Then comes day-away in 31, with key-survey in 32, way-stay in 33, way-say in 34, way-stay in 36, day-stay in 39. Hide-pride in 32 leads on to hide-side in 34, abide-slide in 37, abide-wide in 38. Woe-know in 34 leads on to slow-know, slow-go in 35, slow-woe in 36, show-so in 39. Then come lesser rhyme-waves find-wind, gone-moan, thee-be. Even more striking and significant as a unifying link is the carrying over of the pattern (to revert to my original metaphor) into the succeeding group. Rest-oppressed in 41, the last Absence sonnet, is taken up in the Jealousy group by west-rest in 42, and arrest-interest in 43.

There is another pattern—the linking together of every fourth sonnet—woven into the Absence group. But the rhyme-texture is a little uneven and the design is seen to better advantage in the seven sonnets on Death, 42–48, which usher in the Jealousy group. Here every fourth sonnet is linked up in an almost unbroken series of word-links: lie 42—dead 43—pen 44—cry 45—dead 46—pen 47—lie 48. The effect of rhyme-texture so close in a group so small on a subject so clearly defined is a very definite enhancement of the sense of unity. Though I cannot detect a rigid system in all this, the deliberate character of the design is unmistakable. This rhyme-texture constitutes in fact another very useful, if only occasional, check.

Both designs are woven into the sixteen sonnets, 139–154, which bring the Dark Lady and indeed the whole sequence to a close. Here the rhyme-wave rolls slowly: face-grace 139, face-disgrace 140, face-place 141, place-face 143; eyes-despise 142, eyes-lies 143, lies-subleties 144, enemies-injuries 145, despise-eyes 146, lies-eyes 147; sight-might 145, white-delight 148, sight-aright 149, bright-night 150, might-sight 151. The interlinking of every fourth sonnet (elsewhere usually as intermittent as in the Absence group) is uniform from end to end. And on top of all this there is a persistent rhyme echo (most noticeable perhaps in the Remorse group), which can be hardly other than designed. And nowhere is this echo more marked than in 152, the Lust sonnet, which is made up of rhymes from 138, 140, 144 and 153.

The last check I have to describe is perhaps the most important, certainly the most interesting of all. Now it is five minutes' work to divide the sonnets mechanically into two categories: (a) those in which the pronoun of address (allegorical sonnets excluded) is thou, and (b) the rest. There are eighty-six personal thou-sonnets, pure and simple; to these must be added sonnet 28, a typical thou-sonnet into which a couple of you's have managed to creep. The rest of the sonnets consist of thirty-four you-sonnets; eight allegorical sonnets addressed to Love or Time or the Muse, all deceptively thou-sonnets in form; seventeen sonnets which are personal in so far as they are written in the first person and descriptive of the friend or the lover in the third person; three sonnets which are personal only in so far as they are written of the friend; and two sonnets which are wholly impersonal. Either category may or may not have to be enlarged by the inclusion of one or more of the four sonnets, 3, 61, 103, 110; for these are ambiguous in form: though personal, they do not reveal the person—thou or you—to whom they are addressed.

Now the difference between the eighty-seven thou-sonnets and the thirty-four you-sonnets proper has long been the subject of speculation. 'The different uses of these pronouns' (I am abridging Alden) 'were first discussed by Goedeke in 1877, later by Dowden, and have been made the starting-point of various interesting discussions, none of which can be said to have reached any result. Dowden's own summary of the facts is as follows: "Sometimes the choice seems to be determined by considerations of euphony, sometimes of rhyme; sometimes intimate affection seems to indicate the use of you and respectful homage that of thou; but this is by no means invariable. . . . In the sonnets to a mistress thou is invariably employed." ' As respectful homage is hardly the keynote of the sonnets to the Dark Lady, these conclusions are disappointing enough. Indeed pursued on these lines, attempts to differentiate between the you and thou-sonnets seem to lead nowhere.

It is different when we turn once more to the mechanics of the sonnets. Let us examine the rhymes again, and this time double rhymes only, and the repetition of the same rhyming word at that. Heart-part, part-heart in 29, where there is not only a double rhyme but a double repetition of a rhyming word, is an extreme example of the kind. A more normal example is state-fate, state-gate in 125. Now of such repetitions of the rhyming word within a sonnet there are fifteen examples in the eighty-seven thou-sonnets. In the other category—which may conveniently though roughly be called you-sonnets after its chief constituent—there are none.¹ This is too big and definite a mechanical differentiation to be brushed aside as negligible. And the same conviction is forced on us surely, when we judge the matter æsthetically. For this repetition of rhyme and especially of the same rhyming word within a sonnet is a technical flaw, even though it is enshrined in such magic of sound and mastery of words as

¹ There is one half-exception of extraordinary interest. The Passionate Pilgrim (1599) version of sonnet 144 has young-tongue, young-tongue, where the Quarto has young-tongue, unjust-trust.

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes
I all alone beweepe my outcast state, or

Then hate me when thou wilt ; if ever, now ;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross.

And when this marked mechanical difference, this serious technical blemish, is found once in every six sonnets in the one category, and is not found at all in the other, then there seems only one conclusion possible, to wit, the two categories are in some way or another essentially different in kind.

I have been at pains to distinguish the two categories in the text : the thou-sonnets, being the more numerous by a score, are left unmarked ; the rest are starred. And now note this astonishing fact. Pull away the starred sonnets, and the thou-sonnets (reinforced by sonnet 3, one of the four ambiguous sonnets which defy purely mechanical classification) link up again at once into a continuous, well-knit chain.

So much for the fact. Let me try to give some idea of its implications and powerful influence as a check on the order of the sonnets. A single example ought to bring out what it means. Sonnet 97 will do, as well as any. It is a thou-sonnet, severed from its fellows by you-sonnets on either side of it. If it is really set in its right place, it must of course link up in meaning both with the two nearest thou- sonnets and also with the two you-sonnets which stand next to it—unless, to be suré, there is a change of subject : here there happens to be none. Mechanically the links must be no less complete. So they are : and they are no mere rhyme-links either, but identical word-links throughout. With 92, the nearest thou-sonnet before it, the links are soul-control and spent ; with 101, the nearest thou-sonnet behind it, age ; with 96, the you-sonnet in front of it, time ; with 98, the you-sonnet that follows it, doom and time-rhyme. Put the matter in term of rhyming words. Of the fourteen rhyming words in sonnet 97 no less than half are repetitions of rhyming words in the four sonnets with which it links up. Put it in terms of rhymes. Of the seven rhymes in sonnet 97 two only are peculiar to itself ; the rest are echoes of rhymes in the four linked sonnets. And though sonnet 97 is an unusually elaborate example, the principle is the same throughout the sonnet chain. Every thou-sonnet links up in meaning and also mechanically with the two nearest thou-sonnets, and with any you-sonnet that stands immediately next to it. And what follows from this ? You can detach every you-sonnet from the chain, and the chain links up again at once, shortened to be sure and less elaborate, here and there perhaps a little abrupt or a trifle obscure in the transition from thought to thought or from mood to mood, but mechanically as perfect and as strong a chain as the larger one from which it has seemingly been fashioned.

And the explanation ? In a work which is devoted to the exposition of one solid fact and of the great conclusion that follows from it, I hardly like to set forth what must at first seem theory, nothing more

But let us again marshal the facts that have to be accounted for :—

(i) The personal thou-sonnets fall, quite mechanically, into a group apart.

(ii) The mechanical differentiation between the thou-sonnets and the you-sonnets proper (there has not been the same curiosity over the rest of the group) is so startling that editor after editor has sought to discover its meaning.

(iii) More than 17 per cent. of the thou-sonnets show yet another mechanical characteristic which is wholly lacking in the other group.

So far as we have got, there is warrant for holding that so marked a mechanical difference between the two groups into which the sonnets are divisible almost as mechanically as a pack of cards into suits, constitutes a difference in kind. And one seems driven into some such working hypothesis as this. The two groups are either the work of different men or the work of the same man at different periods. The rhyme-linked sonnet-chain puts the first alternative (for most of us at any rate) finally out of court. The second alternative is not to be shaken off so easily. On the contrary, it becomes more and more insistent as we continue to marshal the facts for which we have to account :—

(iv) The mechanical characteristic of the thou-sonnets is a serious technical blemish. The working hypothesis seems to force itself upon us now in an even more concrete form : the thou-sonnets are Shakespeare's earlier, the other sonnets Shakespeare's later and more mature work. This is a large hypothesis indeed, one not to be accepted without many searchings of mind. But is there any other that will cover the puzzling facts as fully? And is there any other that will cover the last and crowning fact :—

(v) The thou-sonnets if extracted from the sonnet-chain without disarrangement of their order link together forthwith to form a harmonious chain by themselves.

An astonishing climax this. In the face of it can one really refuse to entertain the second alternative as a working hypothesis, until another is found—if in truth another ever can be found—to cover the whole body of facts if not better at least as well? For myself scepticism has been gradually overborne in the tests to which the hypothesis has been put in the working out of the sonnet order, and I now accept it as a fact.

If then it be a fact, how is it to be accounted for? Something like this, I imagine. Shakespeare wrote the eighty-eight ¹ thou-sonnets first, arranging them in the linked order in which they stand in the text, and fashioning them gradually—for they contain distinct signs of the passage of time—into the chain composed of the two sonnet cycles addressed to the Youth and the Dark Lady. Then he let his work lie untouched for some time; long enough at any rate for him unconsciously to discard the use of thou and to drop naturally into the use of you as the pronoun of address when he came to revise his work. Revision perhaps is the wrong word to use. For he left every one of the earlier sonnets standing, and standing in its original order, merely inserting a fresh sonnet or group of sonnets here and there in the chain, sometimes to clear up an obscurity, sometimes to round off an abruptness in transition; sometimes to relieve the monotony of the personal sonnets by sonnets allegorical or impersonal in form, sometimes perhaps for the sheer joy of weaving a new rhyme pattern into the fabric, sometimes of course to give fresh inspiration play. It is a fascinating study that a comparative analysis of the contents of the two editions will open up; one that promises to throw light on some of the many controversies that have raged round the Sonnets.¹ Every real or imaginary chronological allusion that has been traced will have to be scrutinized afresh; for much will hang on whether it figured in the Sonnets from the beginning, or entered later on revision. Past literary judgments will have to come up for review; and not all, I fancy, will be found to need so little restatement as Dowden's surmise that sonnets LXIV-LXXIV—to which the second edition contributed no less than seven out of eleven—seems to echo the graver tone of the later plays.

¹ 86 thou-sonnets, plus the thou-you-sonnet 28, plus the ambiguous sonnet 3.

Now if this is at all near the mark, the most startling feature about it would be that we have the original eighty-eight sonnets intact. For note this. If Shakespeare had torn up a thou-sonnet on revision and substituted a fresh sonnet on the same theme in its place, then unless the rhyme-texture were very close or the arm of coincidence very long the chain of thou-sonnets would have been broken. On the part of almost any other author who sat down to add sixty-six sonnets to a cycle of eighty-eight sonnets written some time before, this kingly disdain to blot out a single sonnet—and there are one or two which jar a little even on idolatry—would be hard to believe. I am not sure that it is not characteristic of Shakespeare. Ben Jonson, who ought to know, evidently thought so. How vividly he puts it in that passage in 'Timber or Discoveries':—

¹ Note, for instance, that on this showing all thou-sonnets were written before 1599, the year Jaggard printed the you-sonnets 147 and 153 in The Passionate Pilgrim.

 'I remember, the Players have often mentioned it as an honour to Shakespeare, that in his writing, (whatsoever he penn'd) hee never blotted out line. My answer hath beene, would he had blotted a thousand. Which they thought a malevolent speech. I had not told posterity this, but for their ignorance, who choose that circumstance to commend their friend by, wherein he most faulted; and to justifie mine owne candor, for I lov'd the man, and doe honour his memory (on this side Idolatry) as much as any. Hee was (indeed) honest, and of an open, and free nature, had an excellent Phantoie; brave notions, and gentle expressions: wherein hee flow'd with that facility, that some-time it was necessary he should be stop'd.'

It is on a wonderful voyage of discovery that the rhyme-link has led us. Yet how trivial the rhyme-link is in itself! And herein lies, I suppose, the chief reason why it has escaped detection, though the world has been peering all these years into every other feature of the Sonnets. Triviality and the conventional setting in which the rhyme-link seems embedded in most of the pairs in the Quarto have been, as it were, its protective colouring. For conventionality seems to settle down on the pairs when they are torn from the context as they are in the Quarto, and to crush the vitality out of them. The pairs which are most inseparable and in which the rhyme-link is most obvious are among the least arresting of the sonnets. The mind does not linger lovingly over them. The plethora of rhyme repetition and still more of word repetition heightens one's sense of conventionality and helps to hide the purpose of the rhymes. The very reiteration of the sounds repels us, and leaves us with the impression that they are not rhymes at all. But although all this has helped, I imagine, to keep the secret of their rhyme-link buried, there has been another influence at work.

Thou blnd fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes
That they behold, and see not what they see?

Love of the Sonnets, worship of Shakespeare, pious reverence for the traditional order of the Quarto—these have been blinding our eyes to what has stared us in the face.

Was it accident or design that broke the Sonnet-chain? Was the orderly disorder of the Quarto the best an unauthorised publisher could make out of chaos; or was it all that Shakespeare—or one of those friends of his among whom Meres tells us his 'sugred' sonnets circulated—intended the world to possess? These are puzzling questions. But the deliberate barrier that is placed in the Quarto between the sonnets to the Youth and the sonnets to the Dark Lady is significant. To find 154 scattered sonnets and then to sort them unerringly into the two groups to which they belong was beyond the constructive criticism of a casual publisher like the printer of the Quarto; I am not sure that it was not beyond the constructive criticism of any man. Nor can I believe that the printer came across two separate groups of scattered sonnets and was able to piece them together into the seeming orderliness of the Quarto. Still less likely is it that the chains broke at haphazard, and that some of the links simply held together. There is too much method in the Quarto arrangement for it to be other than the work of design. And if of design, is there any need to look beyond Shakespeare himself? The motive seems clear enough, at any rate to those of us who have always looked upon the Sonnets as the passionate expression of a storm-swept period in Shakespeare's life. For us there is no difficulty in regarding the orderly disorder of the Quarto as a veil of Shakespeare's own making, to hide or at least to shield his secrets from an 'ill-wresting world.' And, though the withdrawing of the veil has revealed no secrets we did not guess before, has the veil really been transparent all the time? With others it has surely served Shakespeare's purpose well. For it has mystified many an editor and thousands in their train into reading esoteric mysticism or literary posturing into what is personal and passionately real.

'Hitherto no theory or discovery'—I am quoting the Arden edition—'has increased our enjoyment of any line in the Sonnets or cleared up any difficulty.' Who shall say this now? Look how the conventional sonnets shed much of their conventionality, become purposeful and ennobled as they return to their rightful place; how each sonnet over and above its own graciousness takes on a deeper meaning and an added beauty as a living part of the majestic whole. And whose pleasure is not quickened on reading the beloved words anew in the even march of sonnet after sonnet from opening to close, the mind distracted and disturbed no longer, as in the Quarto, by incongruity of idea or mood or subject? The trivial rhyme-link has restored to the Sonnets that unity which gives a work of art more than half its beauty by giving it almost all its meaning.

I have often wondered whether we should pore so lovingly over the Sonnets were it not for the mystery of them. If all their secrets were laid bare, would their appeal be so impelling? Not quite, I fancy, at any rate to some of us. Yet the laying bare of the well-kept secret of the rhyme-link will rob them of none of their magic. Though it will scare many a brave theory into oblivion, it will leave many another untouched and set others perhaps astir. To the riddle of Fair Youth or Dark Lady or Rival Poet, it has, for aught I know, no clue to offer. Though the veil has been lifted ever so little, and we can now pry upon the Sonnets in the intimacy in which Shakespeare wrote them, mystery broods over them still.

TO . THE . ONLIE . BEGETTER . OF THESE . INSVING . SONNETS .
M^r W. H. ALL . HAPPINESSE .
AND . THAT . ETERNITIE .
PROMISED
BY .
OVR . EVER-LIVING . POET .
WISHETH .
THE . WELL-WISHING .
ADVENTVRER . IN .
SETTING .
FORTH .

T. T.

THE ORIGINAL ORDER OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS

PART I

I

A WOMAN'S face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion ;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion ;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth ;
A maiden hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth,
And for a woman wert thou first created ;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

pleasure

2

SOME glory in their birth, some in their skill,
 Some in their wealth, some in their body's force ;
 Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill ;
 Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse ;
 And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
 Wherein it finds a joy above the rest.
 But these particulars are not my measure ;
 All these I better in one general best :
 Thy love is better than high birth to me,
 Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
 Of more delight than hawks or horses be ;
 And having thee, of all men's pride I boast.
 Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
 All this away, and me most wretched make.

pleasure

boast

3

LET those who are in favour with their stars
 Of public honour and proud titles boast,
 Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
 Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
 Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
 But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die.
 The painful warrior famoused for fight,
 After a thousand victories once foil'd
 Is from the book of honour razed quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.
 Then happy I, that love and am belov'd
 Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

boast

eye ; buried

4

THY bosom is endeared with all hearts,
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead ;
 And there reigns love, and all love's loving parts,
 And all those friends which I thought buried.
 How many a holy and obsequious tear
 Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
 As interest of the dead, which now appear
 But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie !
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
 Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
 Who all their parts of me to thee did give ;
 That due of many now is thine alone.

Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
 And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

buried ; eye appear eye 6

*5

WHAT is your substance, whereof are you made,
 That millions of strange shadows on you tend ?
 Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
 And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
 Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
 Is poorly imitated after you ;
 On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
 And you in Grecian tires are painted new ;
 Speak of the spring and foison of the year,
 The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
 The other as your bounty doth appear ;
 And you in every blessed shape we know.

In all external grace you have some part, °
 But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

appear

part²heart

6

SIN of self-love possesseth all mine eye
 And all my soul and all my every part ;
 And for this sin there is no remedy,
 It is so grounded inward in my heart.
 Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
 No shape so true, no truth of such account ;
 And for myself mine own worth do define,
 As I all other in all worths surmount.
 But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
 Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
 Mine own self-love quite contrary I read ;
 Self so self-loving were iniquity.

'Tis thee, myself, that for myself I praise,
 Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

part-heart
 4 eye

heart

7

MY glass shall not persuade me I am old,
 So long as youth and thou are of one date ;
 But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
 Then look I death my days should expiate.
 For all that beauty that doth cover thee
 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
 Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
 How can I then be elder than thou art ?
 O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
 As I, not for myself, but for thee will ;
 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
 As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain ;
 Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

heart

date

8

SHALL I compare thee to a summer's day ?
 Thou art more lovely and more temperate.
 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
 And summer's lease hath all too short a date ;
 Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
 And often is his gold complexion dimm'd ;
 And every fair from fair sometime declines,
 By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd.
 But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st ;
 Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
 When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st.
 So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
 So long lives this, and this gives life to thee !

date

grow'st

9

THOU, my lovely boy, who in thy power
 Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour ;
 Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
 Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st ;
 If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
 As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back,
 She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
 May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
 Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure ;
 She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure !
 Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
 And her quietus is to render thee,

grow'st

power ; back
grow'st 14

*10

SINCE brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,

But sad mortality o'er-sways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?

O, none! unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright

power; back

(might)

*11

WHEN I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

(night)

decay

*12

BUT wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit.
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this time's pencil or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.

To give away yourself keeps yourself still;

And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

decay

decay

*13

O, THAT you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live.
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give.
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?

O, none but unthrifs! dear my love, you know

You had a father; let your son say so.

decay

(de)cease; decay

14

AS fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
 In one of thine, from that which thou departest ;
 And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
 Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest.

Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase.
 Without this, folly, age and cold decay :
 If all were minded so, the times should cease
 And threescore year would make the world away.
 Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
 Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish.
 Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more ;
 Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish.
 She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

decay ; cease
 9 grow'st

increase—cease ; die

15

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
 That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
 But as the ripper should by time decease,
 His tender heir might bear his memory.
 But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
 Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
 Making a famine where abundance lies,
 Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
 Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
 And only herald to the gaudy spring,
 Within thine own bud buriest thy content
 And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
 Pity the world ! or else this glutton be,
 To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

increase—(de)cease ; die eyes—lies

16

WHEN forty winters shall besiege thy brow
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held;
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!

This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

lies-eyes

use

17

UNTHRIFTY loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, Beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?

Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which used, lives th' executor to be.

use spend

18

IS it for fear to wet a widow's eye
 That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
 Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
 The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife.
 The world will be thy widow and still weep
 That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
 When every private widow well may keep
 By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.
 Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend
 Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
 But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
 And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.

No love towards others in that bosom sits
 That on himself such murderous shame commits.

spend

mind

19

FOR shame deny that thou 'bear'st love to any,
 Who for thyself art so unprovident.
 Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
 But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
 For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate
 That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
 Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
 Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
 O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind
 Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
 Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
 Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
 Make thee another self, for love of me,
 That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

mind

(hate; mind)

20

NOT from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
 And yet methinks I have astronomy ;
 But not to tell of good or evil luck,
 Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality ;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
 Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
 Or say with princes if it shall go well,
 By oft predict that I in heaven find.
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
 As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
 If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert.

Or else of thee this I prognosticate :

Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date (find ; date) (well) art 22

*21

THOSE hours that with gentle work did frame
 The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
 Will play the tyrants to the very same
 And that unfair which fairly doth excel.
 For never-resting time leads summer on
 To hideous winter, and confounds him there :
 Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,
 Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where.
 Then, were not summer's distillation left,
 A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
 Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
 Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was !

But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
 Leese but their show : their substance, still lives sweet.

(dwell)

(there ; gone)

22

THEN let not winter's ragged hand deface
 In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd.
 Make sweet some vial ; treasure thou some place
 With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
 That use is not forbidden usury,
 Which happies those that pay the willing loan ;
 That's for thyself to breed another thee,
 Or ten times happier, be it ten for one ;
 Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
 If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee ;
 Then what could death do, if thou shouldst depart,
 Leaving thee living in posterity ?

Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
 To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

(loan ; fair)

one

20 art

23

MUSIC to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly ?
 Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
 Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
 Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy ?
 If the true concord of well tuned sounds,
 By unions married, do offend thine ear,
 They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
 In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
 Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
 Strikes each in each by mutual ordering ;
 Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
 Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing ;

Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
 Sings this to thee : ' Thou single wilt prove none.'

one another-mother

24

LOOK in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
 Now is the time that face should form another ;
 Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
 Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.
 For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
 Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry ?
 Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
 Of his self-love, to stop posterity ?
 Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
 Calls back the lovely April of her prime.
 So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
 Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
 But if thou live remember'd not to be,
 Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

another-mother

tomb ; time prime-time 26

*25

WHO will believe my verse in time to come,
 If it were fill'd with your most high deserts ?
 Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
 Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
 If I could write the beauty of your eyes
 And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
 The age to come would say ' This poet lies !
 Such heavenly touches ne'er touched earthly faces.'
 So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
 Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
 And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
 And stretched metre of an antique song.

But were some child of yours alive ~~that~~ time,
 - You should live twice : in it and in my rhyme.

tomb ; time'

time'

26

WHEN I do count the clock that tells the time,
 And see the brave day sunk in hideous night ;
 When I behold the violet past prime,
 And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white ;
 When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
 Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
 And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
 Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard ;
 Then of thy beauty do I question make,
 That thou among the wastes of time must go,
 Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
 And die as fast as they see others grow ;

And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence—

Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

time

(night)

24 time-prime

27

LO, in the orient when the gracious light
 Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
 Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
 Serving with looks his sacred majesty ;
 And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
 Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
 Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
 Attending on his golden pilgrimage ;
 But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
 Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
 The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
 From his low tract, and look another way.

So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
 Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

(light)

still ; son

28

MINE eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart ;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art ;
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done :
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee.

Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art :
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

still, sun

lies-eyes ; heart

29

MINE eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight ;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,
A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes ;
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impanneled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart ;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part.
As thus : mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

eyes-lies ; heart

sight ; heart-part

30

BETWIXT mine eye and heart a league is took,
 And each doth good turns now unto the other ;
 When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
 Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother.
 With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
 And to the painted banquet bids my heart ;
 Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
 And in his thoughts of love doth share a part.
 So, either by thy picture or my love,
 Thyself away art present still with me ;
 For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
 And I am still with them and they with thee ;
 Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
 Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

heart-part ; sight

took-look ; sight-delight part 33

*31

SO are you to my thoughts as food to life,
 Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground ;
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found :
 Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
 Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure ;
 Now counting best to be with you alone,
 Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure ;
 Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by clean starved for a look ;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took.
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

sight-delight ; look-took.

treasure-pleasure

*32

SO am I as the rich, whose blessed key
 Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
 The which he will not every hour survey,
 For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
 Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
 Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
 Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
 Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
 So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
 Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
 To make some special instant special blest,
 By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
 Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
 Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

treasure-pleasure

are; chest

33

HOW careful was I, when I took my way,
 Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
 That to my use it might unused stay
 From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
 But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
 Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
 Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
 Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
 Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
 Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art
 Within the gentle closure of my breast,
 From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
 And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
 For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

are; chest

way

30 part

34

HOW heavy do I journey on the way,
 When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
 Doth teach that ease and that repose to say:
 ' Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend ! '
 The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
 His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee.
 The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide ;
 Which heavily he answers with a groan,
 More sharp to me than spurring to his side ;
 For that same groan doth put this in my mind :
 My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

way

know

35

THUS can my love excuse the slow offence
 Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed :
 From where thou art why should I haste me thence ?
 Till I return, of posting is no need.
 O, what excuse will my poor beast then find,
 When swift extremity can seem but slow ?
 Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
 In winged speed no motion shall I know !
 Then can no horse with my desire keep pace ;
 Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
 Shall weigh no dull flesh in his fiery race ;
 But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade :
 Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
 Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go.

know

slow

36

IF the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
 Injurious distance should not stop my way ;
 For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
 From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
 No matter then although my foot did stand
 Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee ;
 For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
 As soon as think the place where he would be.
 But ah, thought kills me, that I am not thought,
 To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone ;
 But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
 I must attend time's leisure with my moan ;
 Receiving nought by elements so slow
 But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

slow

gone

37

THE other two, slight air and purging fire,
 Are both with thee, wherever I abide ;
 The first my thought, the other my desire,
 These present-absent with swift motion slide.
 For when these quicker elements are gone
 In tender embassy of love to thee,
 My life, being made of four, with two alone
 Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy,
 Until life's composition be recur'd
 By those swift messengers return'd from thee ;
 Who even but now come back again, assur'd
 Of thy fair health, recounting it to me.
 This told, I joy ; but then no longer glad,
 I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

gone

abide

38

WEARY with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd ;
 But then begins a journey in my head,
 To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd.
 For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see ;
 Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Which like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.
 Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
 For thee and for myself no quiet find.

abide

see

39

WHEN most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
 For all the day they view things unrespected ;
 But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
 And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.
 Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
 How would thy shadow's form form happy show
 To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
 When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so !
 How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
 By looking on thee in the living day,
 When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
 Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay !
 All days are nights to see till I see thee,
 And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

see

(light)

40

IS it thy will thy image should keep open
 My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
 Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
 While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?
 Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
 So far from home into my deeds to pry,
 To find out shames and idle hours in me,
 The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
 O no! thy love, though much, is not so great,
 It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake.
 For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
 From me far off, with others all too near.

(night)

night

41

HOW can I then return in happy plight,
 That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
 When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
 But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
 And each, though enemies to either's reign,
 Do in consent shake hands to torture me;
 The one by toil, the other to complain
 How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
 I tell the day to please him, thou art bright
 And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven;
 So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night:
 When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even.
 But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
 And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

night

rest

42

THAT time of year thou mayst in me behold
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
 Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
 Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
 In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
 As after sunset fadeth in the west ;
 Which by and by black night doth take away,
 Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
 In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
 That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
 Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.

This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,

To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

rest

away ; rest

43

BUT be contented : when that fell arrest
 Without all hail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,
 Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee :
 The earth can have but earth, which is his due ;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me.
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead ;
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered.

The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

(ar)rest ; away

 dead
 (stay) 47

*44

OR I shall live your epitaph to make,
 Or you survive when I in earth am rotten,
 From hence your memory death cannot take,
 Although in me each part will be forgotten.
 Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
 Though I, once gone, to all the world must die ;
 The earth can yield me but a common grave,
 When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
 Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
 Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read ;
 And tongues to be your being shall rehearse.
When all the breathers of this world are dead,
You still shall live—such virtue hath my pen—
 Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

dead

(die ; dead)

*45

T IRED with all these, for restful death I cry :
 As, to behold desert a beggar born,
 And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
 And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
 And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
 And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
 And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
 And strength by limping sway disabled,
 And art made tongue-tied by authority,
 And folly, doctor-like, controlling skill,
 And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
 And captive good attending captain ill.
 Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

(cry ; strumpeted)

gone

*46

NO longer mourn for me when I am dead
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Give warning to the world that I am fled
 From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.
 Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 If thinking on me then should make you woe.
 O if, I say, you look upon this verse
 When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay;
 Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

gone

(clay

47

IF thou survive my well-contented day
 When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover;
 Compare them with the bettering of the time,
 And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
 Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
 Exceeded by the height of happier men.
 O then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
 'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
 A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
 To march in ranks of better equipage.
 But since he died, and poets better prove,
 Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his lovè.'

(day)

prove-love

43 (day)

pen 54

*48

O, LEST the world should task you to recite
 What merit lived in me, that you should love
 After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove ;
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
 To do more for me than mine own desert,
 And hang more praise upon deceased I
 Than niggard truth would willingly impart.
 O, lest your true love may seem false in this
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor you !

For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

love-prove

quite ; forth-worth

*49

A LACK, what poverty my Muse brings forth,
 That having such a scope to show her pride,
 The argument, all bare, is of more worth
 Than when it hath my added praise beside !
 O, blame me not, if I no more can write !
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace.
 Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well ?
 For to no other pass my verses tend
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell ;
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
 Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

forth-worth ; quite

• well-tell

*50

WHO is it that says most ? which can say more
 Than this rich praise, that you alone are you ?
 In whose confine immured is the store
 Which should example where your equal grew.
 Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
 That to his subject lends not some small glory ;
 But he that writes of you, if he can tell
 That you are you, so dignifies his story.
 Let him but copy what in you is writ,
 Not making worse what nature made so clear,
 And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
 Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
 Being fond on praise which makes your praises worse.

(d)well-tell more ; you

*51

MY tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
 While comments of your praise, richly com-
 pl'd,

Rehearsers character with golden quill,
 And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd.
 I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
 And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry ' Amen '
 To every hymn that able spirit affords,
 In polish'd form of well refined pen.
 Hearing you prais'd, I say ' 'Tis so, 'tis true,'
 And to the most of praise add something more ;
 But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
 Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,
 Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

more ; you

you

*52

WAS it the proud full sail of his great verse,
 Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
 That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,
 Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
 Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
 Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
 No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
 Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
 He, nor that affable familiar ghost
 Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
 As victors of my silence cannot boast;
 I was not sick of any fear from thence.

But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
 Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

you

write

*53

O, HOW I faint when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
 To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
 But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
 The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
 Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
 Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
 Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
 He of tall building and of goodly pride.

Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
 The worst was this: my love was my decay.

write

• (away)

54

WHILST I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace ;
 But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
 And my sick Muse doth give another place.
 I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen ;
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
 Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

(say) 47 pen

say invent 58

*55

ORTRUANT Muse, what shall be thy amends
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed ?
 Both truth and beauty on my love depends ;
 So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
 Make answer, Muse : wilt thou not haply say,
 ' Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd ;
 Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay ;
 But best is best, if never intermix'd ?'
 Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb ?
 Excuse not silence so, for 't lies in thee
 To make him much outlive a gilded tomb
 And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
 Then do thy office, Muse ; I teach thee how
 To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

say

dumb-tomb

*56

I NEVER saw that you did painting need,
 I And therefore to your fair no painting set ;
 I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
 The barren tender of a poet's debt ;
 And therefore have I slept in your report,
 That you yourself, being extant, well might show
 How far a modern quill doth come too short,
 Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
 This silence for my sin you did impute,
 Which shall be most my glory, being dumb ;
 For I impair not beauty being mute,
 When others would give life and bring a tomb.
 There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
 Than both your poets can in praise devise.

dumb-tomb

show

*57

LET not my love be call'd idolatry,
 L Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
 Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence ;
 Therefore my verse to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
 ' Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument,
 ' Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words ;
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
 ' Fair, kind, and true,' have often liv'd alone,
 Which three till now never kept seat in one.

show

(spent)

58

HOW can my Muse want subject to invent While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse

Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse ?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight ;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light ?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rhymers invoke ;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.

If my slight Muse do please these curious days
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

(invent)

verse

54 invent

59

SO oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine and born of thee ;
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be.

But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

verse

Muse-use

60

I GRANT thou wert not married to my Muse,
 And therefore mayst without attain't o'erlook
 The dedicated words which writers use
 Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
 Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
 Finding thy worth a limit past my praise ;
 And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
 Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
 And do so, love ; yet when they have devis'd
 What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
 Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd
 In true plain words by thy true-telling friend,
 And their gross painting might be better us'd
 Where cheeks need blood ; in thee it is abus'd.

Muse-use

Muse-use
praise-days 62

*61

SO is it not with me as with that Muse
 Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
 Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
 And every fair with his fair doth rehearse ;
 Making a couplement of proud compare,
 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
 With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
 That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
 O let me, true in love, but truly write,
 And then believe me, my love is as fair
 As any mother's child, though not so bright
 As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air.
 Let them say more that like of hearsay well,
 I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

Muse-use

fair-air

THAT thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve
 Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
 For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd;
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To tie up envy, evermore enlarg'd.

If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

fair-air

show

60 days-praise

THOSE parts of thee that the world's eye doth view

Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
 All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
 Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.

Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
 But those same tongues, that give thee so thine own,
 In other accents do this praise confound
 By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.

They look into the beauty of thy mind,
 And that, in guess, they measure by their deeds;
 Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds.

But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
 The soil is this, that thou dost common grow.

show

(due deeds 67

*64

A H, wherefore with infection should he live
 And with his presence grace impiety,
 That sin by him advantage should achieve
 And lace itself with his society?
 Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
 And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
 Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
 Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
 Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
 For she hath no exchequer now but his,
 And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
 O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had
 In days long since, before these last so bad.

(hue)

live

*65

O, HOW much more doth beauty beauteous seem
 By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
 The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
 For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
 The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
 As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
 Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
 When summer's breath their masked buds discloses;
 But, for their virtue only is their show,
 They live unwoo'd and unrespected fade;
 Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
 Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made.
 And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
 When that shall vade, my verse distills your truth.

live

(dye; show

*66

FULL many a glorious morning have I seen
 Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
 Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy ;
 Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
 With ugly rack on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
 Even so my sun one early morn did shine
 With all-triumphant splendour on my brow ;
 But, out, alack ! he was but one hour mine,
 The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
 Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth ;
 Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

(eye ; brow)

face—disgrace

67

WHY didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke ?
 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
 To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face ;
 For no man well of such a salve can speak
 That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace.
 Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief ;
 Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss ;
 The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
 To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
 Ah, but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
 And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

face—disgrace

grief ; loss—cross

63 deeds

68

THAT thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
 And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly ;
 That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
 A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
 Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye :
 Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her ;
 And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
 Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
 If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
 And losing her, my friend hath found that loss ;
 Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
 And both for my sake lay on me this cross.
 But here's the joy : my friend and I are one ;
 Sweet flattery ! then she loves but me alone.

grief ; loss - cross.

grief

69

TAKE all my loves, my love, yea, take them all ;
 What hast thou then more than thou hadst before ?
 No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call ;
 All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
 Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
 I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest ;
 But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
 By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
 I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
 Although thou steal thee all my poverty ;
 And yet, love knows, it is a greater grief
 To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.
 Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows, "
 Kill me with spites ; yet we must not be foes.

grief

' (foes)

70

HOW sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
 Which like a canker in the fragrant rose,
 Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
 O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins inclose!
 That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
 Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
 Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
 Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
 O, what a mansion have those vices got
 Which for their habitation chose out thee,
 Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
 And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
 Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
 The hardest knife ill us'd doth lose his edge.

(rose)

sport-report

71

SOME say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
 Some say, thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
 Both grace and faults are loved of more and less:
 Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
 As on the finger of a throned queen
 The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
 So are those errors that in thee are seen
 To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
 How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
 If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
 How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
 If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
 As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

sport-report

away

72

BUT do thy worst to steal thyself away,
 For term of life thou art assured mine;
 And life no longer than thy love will stay,
 For it depends upon that love of thine.
 Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end;
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend.
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
 O, what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die!
 But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

away

(end)
(his) 74

*73

BEING your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
 I have no precious time at all to spend,
 Nor services to do, till you require.
 Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
 Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
 Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
 When you have bid your servant once adieu;
 Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
 Where you may be, or your affairs suppose;
 But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
 Save, where you are how happy you make those.
 So true a fool is love that in your will,
 Though you do any thing, he thinks no ill.

(tend)

• (adieu)

74

SO shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband ; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new :
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place.
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
 In many's looks the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange ;
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell ;
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show.

(true)
 72 (eye)

(dwell-tell)
 (true) 76

*75

THAT god forbid that made me first your slave,
 I should in thought control your times of
 pleasure,
 Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
 Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure !
 O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
 The imprison'd absence of your liberty ;
 And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
 Without accusing you of injury.
 Be where you list : your charter is so strong
 That you yourself may privilege your time ;
 Do what you will : to you it doth belong
 Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
 I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
 Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

(hell-well)

belong

76

WHEN thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
 And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
 Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
 And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.
 With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
 Upon thy part I can set down a story
 Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;
 That thou in losing me shalt win much glory,
 And I by this will be a gainer too;
 For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
 The injuries that to myself I do,
 Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.
 Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
 That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

belong
 74 (too)

wrong

77

SAY that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
 And I will comment upon that offence;
 Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
 Against thy reasons making no defence.
 Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
 To set a form upon desired change,
 As I'll myself disgrace; knowing thy will,
 I will acquaintance strangle and look strange;
 Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
 Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
 Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
 And haply of our old acquaintance tell.

For thee, against myself I'll vow debate, • •
 For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

wrong

• hate

78

NO more be griev'd at that which thou hast done :
 Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud ;
 Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
 And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
 All men make faults, and even I in this,
 Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
 Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
 Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are ;
 For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense—
 Thy adverse party is thy advocate—
 And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence.
 Such civil war is in my love and hate,
 That I an accessory needs must be
 To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

hate

sun

79

THOSE pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
 When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
 Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
 For still temptation follows where thou art.
 Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
 Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd ;
 And when a woman woos, what woman's son
 Will sourly leave her till she hath prevail'd ?
 Ay me ! but yet thou mightst my seat forbear,
 And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
 Who lead thee in their riot even there
 Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth :
 Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
 Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

son

(there)

80

HOW like a winter hath my absence been
 From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
 What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!
 What old December's bareness every where!
 And yet this time remov'd was summer's time;
 The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
 Bearing the wanton burthen of the prime,
 Like widow'd wombs after their lord's decease.
 Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
 But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit;
 For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
 And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
 Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer
 That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

(where)

(where)
(where) 89

*81

SWEET Love, renew thy force! Be it not said
 Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
 Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
 To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might.
 So, Love, be thou: although to-day thou fill
 Thy hungry eyes even till they wink with fulness,
 To-morrow see again, and do not kill
 The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
 Let this sad interim like the ocean be
 Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see
 Return of love, more blest may be the view;
 Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
 Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

(care)

(might; now)

*82

FROM you have I been absent in the spring,
 When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
 Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
 That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him.
 Yet nor the lay of birds, nor the sweet smell
 Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
 Could make me any summer's story tell,
 Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew.
 Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
 Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose ;
 They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
 Drawn after you, you pattern of all those !

Yet seem'd it winter still, and you away,
 As with your shadow I with these did play.

(grew ; white) spring ; delight

*83

MY love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming ;
 I love not less, though less the show appear ;
 That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming
 The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
 When I was wont to greet it with my lays ;
 As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
 And stops her pipe in growth of ripper days ;
 Not that the summer is less pleasant now
 Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night ;
 But that wild music burthens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
 Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song.

spring ; delight

every where ; (de)light

*84

WHERE art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long

To speak of that which gives thee all thy might ?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light ?

Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem

In gentle numbers time so idly spent ;

Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem

And gives thy pen both skill and argument.

Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,

If Time have any wrinkle graven there ;

If any, be a satire to decay,

And make Time's spoils despised every where.

Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life ;

So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

every where ; light

life-knife

*85

AGAINST my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'er-worn ;

When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles ; when his youthful morn

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night,

And all those beauties whereof now he's king

Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,

Stealing away the treasure of his spring ;

For such a time do I now fortify

Against confounding age's cruel knife,

That he shall never cut from memory

My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life :

His beauty shall in these black lines ^{be} seen,

And they shall live, and he in them still green.

life-knife

brow

*86

DEVOURING Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood ;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-lived phoenix in her blood ;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleet'st,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets ;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime :
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen ;
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.

Yet do thy worst, old Time ! Despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

brow

brow

*87

THUS is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow ;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head ;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new ;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

brow

dead ; seen-green

TO me, fair-friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
 Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers' pride,
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd
 In process of the seasons have I seen,
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
 Ah, yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
 Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd;
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd.

For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred :
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

seen-green ; dead

pride ; stand

THE forward violet thus did I chide :
 Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,

If not from my love's breath ? The purple pride
 Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
 In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
 The lily I condemned for thy hand,
 And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair ;
 The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
 One blushing shame, another white despair ;
 A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
 And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath ;
 But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
 A vengeful canker eat him up to death.

More flowers I noted, yet I none could see
 But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

pride ; stand

(hair)

80 (hair)

90

THY glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste ;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning mayst thou taste :
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory ;
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity ;
 Look, what thy memory cannot contain
 Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
 Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.

These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

(wear) memory-eternity ; brain

91

THY gift, thy tables, are within my brain
 Full character'd with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank remain,
 Beyond all date, even to eternity :
 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist ;
 Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
 Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
 That poor retention could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score ;
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
 To trust those tables that receive thee more.

To keep an adjunct to remember thee

Were to import forgetfulness in me.

brain ; memory-eternity

eternity ; heart

92

WERE'T aught to me I bore the canopy,
 With my extern the outward honouring ?
 Or laid great bases for eternity,
 Which prove more short than waste or ruining ?
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
 Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
 For compound sweet forgoing simple savour,
 Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent ?
 No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
 And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
 Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art
 But mutual render, only me for thee.
 Hence, thou suborn'd informer ! a true soul
 When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

eternity ; heart

spent spent ; soul-control 97

*93

WHY is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change ?
 Why with the time do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds strange ?
 Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a notèd weed,
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth and where they did proceed ?
 O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument ;
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent ;
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

spent change-strange ; old-told

*94

NO, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change !
 Thy pyramids built up with newer might
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange ;
 They are but dressings of a former sight.
 Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old ;
 And rather make them born to our desire
 Than think that we before have heard them told.
 Thy registers and thee I both defy,
 Not wondering at the present nor the past,
 For thy records and what we see do lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste.

This I do vow, and this shall ever be :

I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

change-strange ; old-told lie

*95

THOSE lines that I before have writ do lie,
 Even those that said I could not love you dearer.

Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
 My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
 But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents
 Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
 Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
 Divert strong minds to the course of altering things ;
 Alas, why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
 Might I not then say ' Now I love you best,'
 When I was certain o'er incertainty,
 Crowning the present, doubting of the rest ?

Love is a babe ; then might I not say so,

To give full growth to that which still doth grow ?

lie

accidents

*96

IF my dear love were but the child of state,
 It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
 As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate,
 Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd
 No, it was builded far from accidents ;
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
 Under the blow of thrall'd discontents,
 Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls.
 It fears not policy, that heretic,
 Which works on leases of short-number'd hours ;
 But all alone stands hugely politic,
 That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers.
 To this I witness call the fools of time,
 Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.

accidents

time

97

NOT mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage ;
 Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd.
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
 Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes ;
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

time

doom ; time-rhyme

92 soul-control ; spent age 101

*98

NOT marble, nor the gilded monuments
 Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme ;
 But you shall shine more bright in these contents
 Than in swept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.
 When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
 And broils root out the work of masonry,
 Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
 The living record of your memory.
 'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
 Shall you pace forth ; your praise shall still find room
 Even in the eyes of all posterity
 That wear this world out to the ending doom.
 So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
 You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

rhyme-time ; doom

time

*99

WHEN in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights ;
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.
 So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring ;
 And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
 They had not skill enough your worth to sing ;
 For we, which now behold these present days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

time

days-praise

*100

IF there be nothing new, but that which is
 Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
 Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
 The second burthen of a former child !
 O, that record could with a backward look,
 Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
 Show me your image in some antique book,
 Since mind at first in character was done !
 That I might see what the old world could say
 To this composed wonder of your frame ;
 Whether we are mended, or whether better they,
 Or whether revolution be the same.

O, sure I am, the wits of former days
 To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

days-praise

same

101

WHAT'S in the brain, that ink may character,
 Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit ?
 What's new to speak, what new to register,
 That may express my love, or thy dear merit ?
 Nothing, sweet boy ! but yet, like prayers divine,
 I must each day say o'er the very same ;
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
 Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
 So that eternal love in love's fresh case
 Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page ;
 Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
 Where time and outward form would show it dead.

same

thine

97 age

102

LORD of my love, to whom in vassalage
 Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
 To thee I send this written ambassage,
 To witness duty, not to show my wit :
 Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
 May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
 But that I hope some good conceit of thine
 In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it ;
 Till whatsoever star that guides my moving,
 Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
 And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
 To show me worthy of thy sweet respect ;
 Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee !
 Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

thine

wit respect 104

*103

AS an unperfect actor on the stage,
 Who with his fear is put besides his part,
 Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
 Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart ;
 So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
 The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
 And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
 O'ercharg'd with burthen of mine own love's might.
 O, let my books be then the eloquence
 And dumb presagers of my speaking breast ;
 Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
 More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
 O, learn to read what silent love hath writ !
 To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

wit

part

104

AGAINST that time, if ever that time come,
 When I shall see thee frown on my defect,
 When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
 Call'd to that audit by advis'd respect ;
 Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass,
 And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
 When love, converted from the thing it was,
 Shall reasons find of settled gravity ;
 Against that time do I ensconce me here
 Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
 And this my hand against myself uprear,
 To guard the lawful reasons on thy part :
 To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
 Since why to love I can allege no cause.

part 102 respect

part part 108

*105

SINCE I left you, mine eye is in my mind,
 And that which governs me to go about
 Doth part his function and is partly blind,
 Seems seeing, but effectually is out ;
 For it no form delivers to the heart
 Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch :
 Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
 Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch ;
 For if it see the rude'st or gentlest sight,
 The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature,
 The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
 The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature.
 Incapable of more, replete with you, •
 My most true mind thus makes mine eye untrue.

part

you—(un)true

*106

O R whether doth my mind, being crown'd with
you,

Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery ?
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy :
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble ?
O, 'tis the first ! 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up !
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup.

If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

you-true

seeing

*107

'T IS better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being ;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing.
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood ?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good ?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own ;
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel ;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown ;
Unless this general evil they maintain :
All men are bad and in their badness reign.

seeing blood-good

108

O, NEVER say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
 As easy might I from myself depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
 That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
 Like him that travels, I return again;
 Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
 So that myself bring water for my stain.
 Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
 That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
 For nothing this wide universe I call,
 Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

blood-good 104 (de)part

call-all (stain) 113

*109

ACCUSE me thus: that I have scant'd all
 Wherein I should your great deserts repay;
 Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
 Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
 That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
 And given to time your own dear-purchas'd right;
 That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
 Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
 Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
 And on just proof surmise accumulate;
 Bring me within the level of your frown,
 But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
 Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
 The constancy and virtue of your love.

all-call minds; love

*110

LET me not to the marriage of true minds
 Admit impediments. Love is not love
 Which alters when it alteration finds,
 Or bends with the remover to remove.
 O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
 That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
 It is the star to every wandering bark,
 Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
 Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
 Within his bending sickle's compass come;
 Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
 But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
 If this be error and upon me prov'd,
 I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

minds; love

shaken-taken

*111

THAT you were once unkind befriends me now,
 And for that sorrow which I then did feel
 Needs must I under my transgression bow,
 Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
 For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
 As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time;
 And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
 To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
 O, that our night of woe might have remember'd
 My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon to you, as you to me then, tender'd
 The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
 But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
 Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

shaken-taken

(bow)

*112

YOUR love and pity doth the impression fill
 Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow ;
 For what care I who calls me well or ill,
 So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow ?
 You are my all the world, and I must strive
 To know my shames and praises from your tongue ;
 None else to me, nor I to none alive,
 That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.
 In so profound abysm I throw all care
 Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
 To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
 Mark how with my neglect I do dispense :
 You are so strongly in my purpose bred
 That all the world besides methinks are dead.

(brow)

(a)live

113

O, HOW thy worth with manners may I sing,
 When thou art all the better part of me ?
 What can mine own praise to mine own self bring ?
 And what is 't but mine own when I praise thee ?
 Even for this let us divided live,
 And our dear love lose name of single one,
 That by this separation I may give
 That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
 O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
 Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
 To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
 Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
 And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
 By praising him here who doth hence remain !

live

one-alone ; twain-remain

108 (twain)

114

LET me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one ;
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,
 Though in our lives a separable spite,
 Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
 Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
 Unless thou take that honour from thy name.
 But do not so ; I love thee in such sort,
 As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

twain—remain ; one—alone

spite

115

THEN hate me when thou wilt ; if ever, now ;
 Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
 Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
 And do not drop in for an after-loss.
 Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd this sorrow,
 Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe ;
 Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
 To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
 If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
 When other petty griefs have done their spite,
 But in the onset come : so shall I taste
 At first the very worst of fortune's might ;
 And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
 Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

spite

woe

116

WHEN to the sessions of sweet silent thought
 I summon up remembrance of things past,
 I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
 And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste ;
 Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow,
 For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
 And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
 And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight ;
 Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
 And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
 The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
 Which I new pay as if not paid before.

But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
 All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

woe

(flow ; moan)
before ; end 119

*117

THEY that have power to hurt and will do none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,
 Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
 Unmoved, cold and to temptation slow ;
 They rightly do inherit heaven's graces
 And husband nature's riches from expense ;
 They are the lords and owners of their faces,
 Others but stewards of their excellence.
 The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
 Though to itself it only live and die,
 But if that flower with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his dignity :

For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds ;
 Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

(slow ; stone)

deeds

*118

O, FOR my sake do you with Fortune chide,
 The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
 That did not better for my life provide
 Than public means which public manners breeds.
 Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
 And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
 To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
 Pity me then and wish I were renew'd ;
 Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
 Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection ;
 No bitterness that I will bitter think,
 Nor double penance, to correct correction.

Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye
 Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

deeds

hand

119

LIKE as the waves make towards the pebbled
 shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end ;
 Each changing place with that which goes before,
 In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
 Nativity, once in the main of light,
 Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
 Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
 And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
 Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
 And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
 Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
 And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.

And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
 Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

hand

shore

116 end-before youth-truth 121

*120

WHEN I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
 The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age ;
 When sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
 And brass eternal slave to mortal rage ;
 When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
 Advantage on the kingdom of the shore
 And the firm soil win of the watery main,
 Increasing store with loss and loss with store ;
 When I have seen such interchange of state,
 Or state itself confounded to decay ;
 Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminat,
 That Time will come and take my love away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

shore

store

121

AS a decrepit father takes delight
 To see his active child do deeds of youth,
 So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
 Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth.
 For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
 Or any of these all, or all, or more,
 Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
 I make my love engrafted to this store.
 So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
 Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
 That I in thy abundance am suffic'd
 And by a part of all thy glory live.
 Look, what is best, that best I wish in thee ;
 This wish I have ; then ten times happy me !

store

youth-truth

119 youth-truth

122

ALAS, 'tis true I have gone here and there,
 And made myself a motley to the view,
 Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most
 dear,

Made old offences of affections new ;
 Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
 Askance and strangely : but, by all above,
 These blenches gave my heart another youth,
 And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love !
 Now all is done, have what shall have no end !
 Mine appetite I never more will grind
 On newer proof, to try an older friend,
 A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.

Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
 Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

truth-youth

new (best) 125

*123

WHAT potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
 Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within,
 Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
 Still losing when I saw myself to win !
 What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
 Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never !
 How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
 In the distraction of this madding fever !
 O benefit of ill ! now I find true
 That better is by evil still made better ;
 And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
 Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
 So I return rebuk'd to my content,
 And gain by ills thrice more than I have spent.

(a)new true

*124

LIKE as, to make our appetites more keen,
 With eager compounds we our palate urge ;
 As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
 We sicken to shun sickness when we purge ;
 Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
 To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding ;
 And sick of welfare found a kind of meetness
 To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
 Thus policy in love, to anticipate
 The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
 And brought to medicine a healthful state,
 Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd.
 But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
 Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

true

state

125

WHEN, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
 I all alone beweepe my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
 And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
 Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
 Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
 Desiring this man's art and that man's scope, -
 With what I most enjoy contented least ;
 Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
 Haply I think on thee, and then my state,
 Like to the lark at break of day arising
 From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate ;
 For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
 That then I scorn to change my state with kings..

state

(state)

122 (possess'd)

126

FAREWELL ! thou art too dear for my possessing,
 And like enough thou know'st thy estimate :
 The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing ,
 My bonds in thee are all determinate.
 For how do I hold thee but by thy granting ?
 And for that riches where is my deserving ?
 The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
 And so my patent back again is swerving.
 Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
 Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking ;
 So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
 Comes home again, on better judgment making.
 Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
 In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

(estimate)

(determinate)

(determinate) 128

PART II

*127

THOSE lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said ' I hate,'
 To me that languish'd for her sake.
 But when she saw my woeful state,
 Straight in her heart did mercy come,
 Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
 Was us'd in giving gentle doom ;
 And taught it thus anew to greet : "
 ' I hate ' she alter'd with an end,
 That follow'd it as gentle day
 Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
 From heaven to hell is flown away ;
 ' I hate ' from hate away she threw,
 And sav'd my life, saying ' not you.'

(state)

state

128

HOW oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
 Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
 With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st
 The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
 Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
 To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
 Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
 At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
 To be so tickled, they would change their state
 And situation with those dancing chips,
 O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
 Making dead wood more blest than living lips.
 Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
 Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

state
 126 (state)

hand
 (hiss) 130

129

THE little Love-god lying once asleep
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
 Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep Came tripping by. But in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd.
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseas'd. But I, my mistress' thrall, Came there for cure, and this by that I prove:
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

hand

†prove-love

130

LOVE is too young to know what conscience is ;
 Yet who knows not conscience is born of love ?
 Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.
 For, thou betraying me, I do betray
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason.
 My soul doth tell my body that he may
 Triumph in love ; flesh stays no farther reason,
 But rising at thy name doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.

No want of conscience hold it that I call
 Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

love-prove 128 (amiss)

love-prove

131

IF thy soul check thee that I come so near,
 I Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy 'Will,'
 And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there ;
 Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
 'Will' will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
 Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
 In things of great receipt with ease we prove
 Among a number one is reckon'd none.
 Then in the number let me pass untold,
 Though in thy store's account I one must be ;
 For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
 That nothing me, a something sweet to thee.

Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
 And then thou lovest me, for my name is 'Will.'

love-prove

Will-still

132

WHOEVER hath her wish, thou hast thy ' Will,'
 And ' Will ' to boot, and ' Will ' in overplus ;
 More than enough am I that vex thee still,
 To thy sweet will making addition thus.
 Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
 Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine ?
 Shall will in others seem right gracious,
 And in my will no fair acceptance shine ?
 The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
 And in abundance addeth to his store ;
 So thou, being rich in ' Will,' add to thy ' Will ' -
 One will of mine, to make thy large ' Will ' more.
 Let no unkind No fair beseechers kill ;
 Think all but one, and me in that one ' Will.'

Will-still

Will-still

133

LO, as a careful housewife runs to catch
 One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
 Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
 In pursuit of the thing she would have stay ;
 Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
 Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
 To follow that which flies before her face,
 Not prizing her poor infant's discontent :
 So runn'st thou, after that which flies from thee,
 Whilst I, thy babe, chase thee afar behind.
 But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
 And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind ;
 So will I pray that thou mayst have thy ' Will,'
 If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

Will-still

Will-still ; kind

134

SO now I have confess'd that he is thine,
 And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will.
 Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
 Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still.
 But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
 For thou art covetous and he is kind ;
 He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
 Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
 The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
 Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
 And sue a friend came debtor for my sake ;
 So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
 Him have I lost ; thou hast both him and me ;
 He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

Will-still ; kind

(free)

135

BESHREW that heart that makes my heart to groan
 For that deep wound it gives my friend and me !
 Is't not enough to torture me alone,
 But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be ?
 Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
 And my next self thou harder hast engross'd ;
 Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken ;
 A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd
 But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail ;
 Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard ;
 Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol.
 And yet thou wilt ; for I, being pent in thee,
 Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

(be)

(be, cross'd)

136

IN loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing ;
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty ! I am perjur'd most :
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost ;
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy ;
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
 Or made them swear against the thing they see ;
 For I have sworn thee fair ; more perjur'd I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie !

(lost ; see)

(see)

137

LOVE is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
 Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
 O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
 And thou shalt find it merits not reproving ;
 Or if it do, not from those lips of thine,
 That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments
 And seal'd false bonds of love, as oft as mine
 Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
 Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those
 Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee ;
 Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
 Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
 If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
 By self-example mayst thou be denied !

(be)

(hide)

138

BE wise as thou art cruel ; do not press
 My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain ;
 Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
 The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
 If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
 Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so ;
 As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
 No news but health from their physicians know.
 For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
 And in my madness might speak ill of thee ;
 Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
 Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
 That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
 Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

(wide) disdain-pain

139

THINE eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
 Have put on black and loving mourners be,
 Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
 And truly not the morning sun of heaven
 Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
 Nor that full star that ushers in the even
 Doth half that glory to the sober west,
 As those two mourning eyes become thy face.
 O, let it then as well beseem thy heart
 To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
 And suit thy pity like in every part.

Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
 And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

disdain-pain

face-grace ; black-lack face 141

*140

IN the old age black was not counted fair ;
 Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name.
 But now is black beauty's successive heir,
 And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame.
 For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
 Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face,
 Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
 But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
 Therefore my mistress' hairs are raven black,
 Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
 At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
 Slandering creation with a false esteem.
 Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
 That every tongue says beauty should look so.

face-(dis)grace ; black-lack face

141

THOU art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
 As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel ;
 For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
 Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
 Yet in good faith some say that thee behold,
 Thy face hath not the power to make love groan.
 To say they err I dare not be so bold,
 Although I swear it to myself alone.
 And ~~to~~ be sure, that is not false I swear,
 A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
 One on another's neck, do witness bear
 Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
 In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,^o
 And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

face

• alone

139 face

142

IN faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
 For they in thee a thousand errors note ;
 But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
 Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote ;
 Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted ;
 Nor tender feeling to base touches prone,
 Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
 To any sensual feast with thee alone ;
 But my five wits nor my five senses can
 Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
 Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
 Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be.
 Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
 That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

alone

eyes pain 145

*143

THOU blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine
 eyes,
 That they behold, and see not what they see ?
 They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
 Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
 If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
 Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
 Why of eye's falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
 Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied ?
 Why should my heart think that a several plot
 Which my heart knows the wide world's common place ?
 Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
 To put fair truth upon so foul a face ?
 In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
 And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

eyes

lies

*144

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth,
 I do believe her, though I know she lies,
 That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
 Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although she knows my days are past the best,
 Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue;
 On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
 But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
 And wherefore say not I that I am old?
 O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
 And age in love loves not to have years told.
 Therefore I lie with her and she with me,
 And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

lies

tongue

145

CALL not me to justify the wrong
 That thy unkindness lays upon my heart.
 Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue;
 Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
 Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
 Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside.
 What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
 Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can bide?
 Let me excuse thee: ah, my love well knows
 Her pretty looks have been mine enemies;
 And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
 That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.
 Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
 Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

tongue

(enemies)

142 pain

146

CANST thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
 When I against myself with thee partake?
 Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
 Am of myself, all-tyrant, for thy sake?
 Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
 On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
 Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend
 Revenge upon myself with present moan?
 What merit do I in myself respect,
 That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
 But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
 Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

(despise)

eyes blind 149

*147

CUPID laid by his brand and fell asleep.
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure, ★
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fir'd,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desir'd,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
 But found no cure. The bath for my help lies
 Where Cupid got new fire: my mistress' eyes.

eyes

ground

*148

MY mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun ;
 Coral is far more red than her lips' red ;
 If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun ;
 If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
 I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
 But no such roses see I in her cheeks ;
 And in some perfumes is there more delight
 Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
 I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
 That music hath a far more pleasing sound ;
 I grant I never saw a goddess go,
 My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground :
 And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
 As any she belied with false compare.

ground

(white ; go)

149

O ME ! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
~~Which have no correspondence with true sight !~~
 Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
 That censures falsely what they see aright ?
 If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
 What means the world to say it is not so ?
 If it be not, then love doth well denote
 Love's eye is not so true as all men's. No,
 How can it ? O, how can Love's eye be true,
 That is so vex'd with watching and with tears ?
 No marvel then, though I mistake my view ;
 The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.

O cunning love ! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
 Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

(sight ; so)

(sight)

146 blind

150

MY love is as a fever, longing still
 For that which longer nurseth the disease ;
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
 The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
 My reason, the physician to my love,
 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
 Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
 Desire is death, which physic did except.
 Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
 And frantic-mad with evermore unrest ;
 My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's are,
 At random from the truth vainly express'd.
 For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
 Who art as black as hell, as dark as night !

(night)

ill

151

O, FROM what power hast thou this powerful might
 With insufficiency my heart to sway ?
 To make me give the lie to my true sight,
 And swear that brightness doth not grace the day ?
 Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
 That in the very refuse of thy deeds
 There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
 That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds ?
 Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate ?
 O, though I love what others do abhor,
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my state.
 If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

ill

(state)

152

THE expense of spirit in a waste of shame
 Is lust in action ; and till action, lust
 Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
 Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust ;
 Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight ;
 Past reason hunted ; and no sooner had,
 Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
 On purpose laid to make the taker mad ;
 Mad in pursuit, and in possession so ;
 Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme ;
 A bliss in proof, and prov'd, a very woe ;
 Before, a joy propos'd ; behind, a dream.
 All this the world well knows ; yet none knows well
 To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

(bait) hell

*153

TWO loves I have of comfort and despair,
 Which like two spirits do suggest me still :
 The better angel is a man right fair,
 The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
 To win me soon to hell, my female evil
 Tempteth my better angel from my side,
 And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
 Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
 And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
 Suspect I may, yet not directly tell ;
 But being both from me, both to each friend,
 I guess one angel in another's hell.
 Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
 Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

hell

(friend)

*154

POOR soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Rebuke these rebel powers that thee array;
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more.
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men;
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

(end)

NOTES

1. 1. 7. So Beeching: Quarto "A man in hue" which can hardly be wrested to sense. Cf. Merchant of Venice II vii, "What says the silver with her virgin hue?"
28. 11. 5-6. The only instance (for 88, in which an allegorical thou appears in a you-sonnet, is none) of a change in the pronoun of address from thou to you within a sonnet. Dowden suggests that you and your may be used indefinitely; but though this might hold in line 5, your true image must surely be definite. The explanation may be carelessness in revision or possibly a mere copyist error.
35. 1. 11. So G. C. M. Smith; Quarto naigh noe dull flesh; most editors neigh—no dull flesh—, which is questionable natural history; un-Shakespearean (though good Browning) in style; and leaves But in the next line in the air. Smith explains: desire will decline to be a burden on the horse's back. Much better take weigh in the common Shakespearean meaning of care for, trouble about.
55. 1. 3. Quarto Reserve their character. Editors preserve their; rehearse thy, your, their; reserve thy, your; deserve their; rescribe their; receive thy; etc. As line 1 implies I think good thoughts, lines 2-3 ought according to 5 to mean while other write good words. Hence one would expect 'comments of your praise are characterized' (i.e. written down); or rather 'others character comments of your praise,' for the parallelism is active not passive throughout: 'other write good words; afford hymns; breathe words.' Hence the reading in the text. Rehearse is used four times in this group, 44, 46, 58 and 61 (where one is also tempted to substitute rehearsing for of hearsay, which all but defies honest interpretation).

63. l. 10. Quarto (and all editors but one) thy deeds. Confusion between thy and their in the Quarto is common. Thus the Quarto reads their outward for thy outward in line 5.
94. l. 11. Quarto doth lye. Many editors follow Malone in changing to do lie. The change, though tempting, would be hardly justified by Shakespearean usage if the sonnet stood alone. It becomes a certainty when the next sonnet with do lie in its first line is restored from its displacement in the Quarto to its proper place.
96. ll. 5-7. Quarto and all editors accident, discontent, cf. the note next following.
98. l. 1. Quarto monument. All editors but one monuments.
- l. 4. Quarto unswept stone, which must apparently be explained as besmear'd with sluttish time; Stengal in swept-stone, which is another way of putting marble.
104. ll. 2-4. Quarto and all editors defects, respects. For defect cf. sonnet 146 All my best doth worship thy defect. For respect cf. King John IV ii. More upon humour than aduers'd respect.
105. l. 14. So several modern editors, for the Quarto maketh mine untrue. Cf. mine eye saith true in 106, which carries on the argument

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

(The Roman numerals give the Quarto order)

Accuse me thus that I have scanted all (CXVII)	No. 109
Against my love shall be, as I am now (LXIII)	85
Against that time, if ever that time come (XLIX)	104
Ah, wherefore with infection should he live (LXVII)	64
Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth (CIII)	49
Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there (CX)	122
As a decrepit father takes delight (XXXVII)	121
As an unperfect actor on the stage (XXIII)	103
As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st (XI)	14
A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted (XX)	1
Being your slave, what should I do but tend (LVII)	73
Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan (CXXXIII)	135
Between mine eye and heart a league is took (XLVII)	30
Be wise as thou art cruel, do not press (CXL)	138
But be contented when that fell arrest (LXXIV)	43
But do thy worst to steal thyself away (XCII)	72
But wherefore do not you a mightier way (XVI)	12
Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not (CXLIX)	146
Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep (CLIII)	147
Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws (XIX)	86
Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing (LXXXVII)	126
For shame deny that thou bear'st love to any (X)	19
From fairest creatures we desire increase (I)	15
From you have I been absent in the spring (XCVIII)	82
Full many a glorious morning have I seen (XXXIII)	66
How can I then return in happy plight (XXVIII)	41
How can my Muse want subject to invent (XXXVIII)	58
How careful was I, when I took my way (XLVIII)	33
How heavy do I journey on the way (L)	34
How like a winter hath my absence been (XCVI)	80
How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st (XXXVIII)	128
How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame (XCV)	70
If my dear love were but the chuld of state (CXXIV)	96
If the dull substance of my flesh were thought (XLIV)	36

	No.
If there be nothing new, but that which is (LIX) .	100
If thou survive my well-contented day (XXXII) .	47
If thy soul check thee that I come so near (CXXXVI) .	131
I grant thou wert not married to my Muse (LXXXII) .	60
I never saw that you did painting need (LXXXIII) .	56
In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes (CXLI) .	142
In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn (CLII) .	136
In the old age black was not counted fair (CXXVII) .	140
Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye (IX) .	18
Is it thy will thy image should keep open (LXI) .	40
Let me confess that we two must be twain (XXXVI) .	114
Let me not to the marriage of true minds (CXVI) .	110
Let not my love be call'd idolatry (CV) .	57
Let those who are in favour with their stars (XXV) .	3
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore (LX) .	119
Like as, to make our appetites more keen (CXVIII) .	124
Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch (CXLIII) .	133
Lo, in the orient when the gracious light (VII) .	27
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest (III) .	24
Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage (XXVI) .	102
Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate (CXLII) .	137
Love is too young to know what conscience is (CLI) .	130
Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war (XLVI) .	29
Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd (XXIV) .	28
Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly (VIII) .	23
My glass shall not persuade me I am old (XXII) .	7
My love is as a fever, longing still (CXLVII) .	150
My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming (CII) .	83
My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun (CXXX) .	148
My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still (LXXXV) .	51
No longer mourn for me when I am dead (LXXI) .	46
No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done (XXXV) .	78
No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change (CXXIII) .	94
Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck (XIV) .	20
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments (LV) .	98
Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul (CVII) .	97
O call not me to justify the wrong (CXXXIX) .	145
O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide (CXI) .	118
O, from what power hast thou this powerful might (CL) .	151
O, how I faint when I of you do write (LXXX) .	53

OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS 129

	No.
O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem (LIV)	65
O, how thy worth with manners may I sing (XXXIX)	113
O, lest the world should task you to recite (LXXII)	48
O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head (CXLVIII)	149
O, never say that I was false of heart (CIX)	108
O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are (XIII)	13
O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power (CXXVI)	9
O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends (CI)	55
Or I shall live your epitaph to make (LXXXI)	44
Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you (CXIV)	106
Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth (CXLVI)	154
Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault (LXXXIX)	77
Shall I compare thee to a summer's day (XVIII)	8
Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea (LKV)	10
Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind (CXIII)	105
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye (LXII)	6
So am I as the rich, whose blessed key (LII)	32
So are you to my thoughts as food to life (LXXV)	31
So is it not with me as with that Muse (XXI)	61
So now I have confess'd that he is thine (CXXXIV)	134
So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse (LXXVIII)	59
So shall I live, supposing thou art true (XCIII)	74
Some glory in their birth, some in their skill (XCI)	2
Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness (XCVI)	71
Sweet Love, renew thy force; be it not said (LVI)	81
Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all (XL)	69
That god forbid, that made me first your slave (LVIII)	75
That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect (LXX)	62
That thou hast her, it is not all my grief (XLII)	68
That time of year thou mayst in me behold (LXXIII)	42
That you were once unkind befriends me now (CXX)	111
The expense of spirit in a waste of shame (CXXIX)	152
The forward violet thus did I chide (XCIX)	89
The little Love-god lying once asleep (CLIV)	129
The other two, slight air and purging fire (XLV)	37
Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now (XC)	115
Then let not winter's ragged hand deface (VI)	22
They that have power to hurt and will do none (XCIV)	117
Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me (CXXXII)	139
Those hours that with gentle work did frame (V)	21
Those lines that I before have writ do lie (CXV)	95
Those lips that Love's own hand did make (CXLV)	127
Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view (LXIX)	63

	No.
Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits (XLI) .	79
Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art (CXXXI) .	141
Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes (CXXXVII) .	143
Thus can my love excuse the slow offence (LI) .	35
Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn (LXVIII) .	87
Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts (XXXI) .	4
Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain (CXXII) .	91
Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear (LXXXVII) .	90
Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry (LXVI) .	45
'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd (CXXI) .	107
To me, fair friend, you never can be old (CIV) .	88
Two loves I have of comfort and despair (CXLIV) .	153
Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend (IV) .	17
Was it the proud full sail of his great verse (LXXXVI) .	52
Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed (XXVII) .	38
Were't aught to me I bore the canopy (CXXV) .	92
What is your substance, whereof are you made (LIII) .	5
What potions have I drunk of Siren tears (CXIX) .	123
What's in the brain, that ink may character (CVIII) .	101
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow (II) .	16
When I consider everything that grows (XV) .	11
When I do count the clock that tells the time (XII) .	26
When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd (LXIV) .	120
When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes (XXIX) .	125
When in the chronicle of wasted time (CVI) .	99
When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see (XLI) .	39
When my love swears that she is made of truth (CXXXVIII) .	144
When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light (LXXXVIII) .	76
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought (XXX) .	116
Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long (C) .	84
Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid (LXXIX) .	54
Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy 'Will' (CXXXV) .	132
Who is it that says most? which can say more (LXXXIV) .	50
Who will believe my verse in time to come (XVII) .	25
Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day (XXXIV) .	67
Why is my verse so barren of new pride (LXXXVI) .	93
Your love and pity doth the impression fill (CXII) .	112

